Roosevelt to Send Draft Message to Whole Nation; Landon Favors Holdover

President to Make Record for Radio But Won't Address Congress in Person

By William V. Nessly
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt, preparing to send to Congress today his message urging retention of selectees in the Army, last night arranged an unprecedented move by which he will broadcast the message to the country, though not delivering it in person to the House and Senate.

Because of the special importance attached to the project by the White House, the President this morning will make a recording of the message in order that the broadcasting companies may put it on their networks, and will also deliver excerpts from the document for the news reels.

Mr. Roosevelt virtually completed work on the message over the week-end, making such progress Saturday and yesterday morning that he was enabled to go for a short cruise on the Potomac with Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Wickard. White House attaches said last night it appeared virtually certain that the message would be ready for the Congress by noon and the record available for broadcasting at any time afterward.

Crowded Week Ahead

Its delivery will usher in a week crowded with dramatic possibilities, as House and Senate grapple with war-born issues already disrupting party lines and intensifying conflict over foreign policies.

The Senate today is expected to take up the contention-fraught measure authorizing the President to take over property required in the defense program.

And before the week is over one or both houses or their committees will have to deal with price-fixing legislation and the $3,504,000,000 tax bill.

Even before the President sends his message on retention of the selectees, the Senate Military Affairs Committee, headed by Chairman Reynolds, of North Carolina, this morning will begin consideration of legislation to accomplish that objective. When the legislation would receive House committee action still was uncertain.

Includes Stiff Opposition

The emphasis Mr. Roosevelt is laying on getting his words before the country is taken as a recognition of the opposition which Congressional leaders have told him the proposal would encounter on Capitol Hill. There have been increasing forecasts during the weekend,

Arming to Teeth Only Course Left to Country, Kansan Says

Declares President's 'Bellicose Policies' Partly to Blame

Topeka, Kans., July 20 (AP).—Alf M. Landon, asserting "the President has the country out on a limb now and we have got to strengthen the tree at the base," announced reluctant support today of proposals to keep selectees and National Guardsmen under arms beyond a year.

"I am compelled by circumstances, brought about partly by the President's policies, to take the position that it is unsafe to release from service these men who have had some physical training and some fundamentals of military coordination," the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee said in an address prepared for a C. B. S. broadcast.

"Today, as a Nation, we are wide open. Under the provocative words and bellicose policies and acts of the President and his Cabinet, we have gone too far not to be armed to the teeth.

"Furthermore, if there is no stopping of Mr. Roosevelt's war policies, he will throw the finest untrained and unequipped army in the world into a shooting war.

"The President's drive to extend the period of service under the Draft Act is just the beginning of a sad revelation to the American people. A revelation that major statements of policy of candidates for the Presidency were 'mere cam-

Aluminum Canvass Here Starts Today

2,000 Volunteer Women Will Visit Homes; Actual Collection Wednesday

To virtually every house in Washington a woman will come today, asking for aluminum—old pans, toys, scraps of metal—twisted junk which has been relegated to the attic and the cellar.

She will be one of 2,000 volunteers in the District, seeking material for battleships, airplanes—the instruments of defense.

The collection is part of a nation-wide effort which is under way in every state of the union under the guidance of the Office of Production Management.

While the canvass will begin today, collection of the metal will not be made until Wednesday when 2,000 Boy Scouts and 1,000 American Legionnaires will stop at your house and the house next door to gather the metal and take it to huge collection bins scattered over the city.

Prudence Advised

Officials of the drive yesterday warned householders they should not give scraps of the precious metal to any but men and boys in the uniform of the Scouts or the Legion.

At the same time, Miss Harriet Elliott, associate administrator of OPM, warned against overenthusiasm in the campaign, stating:

"Tell your friends and neighbors not to donate aluminum ware if that would make it necessary to purchase replacements immediately."

Apartment house managers and proprietors of stores have been asked to collect the material in advance and have it ready for the trucks.

Scouts to Do Their Bit

Washington Boy Scouts have also been brought into line for their part in the work. They held a mass meeting at Treasury House, Pennsylvania Avenue and Fourteenth Street Northwest, and received instructions for the drive. Gale F. Johnson, field director of defense savings for the Treasury, told the scouts that a nation dominated by a philosophy of thrift is a virile nation—a nation which may hold its head high with pride.

T. Semmes Walmsley, former Mayor of New Orleans, made his first public appearance in his new job as inspector general and acting deputy director of the Office of Civilian Defense. Representing Mayor LaGuardia, Civilian Defense Director at the scout rally, he urged the boys to see that "this nation is the same kind of a country when you become men as it is now."

'Key City' Retaken, Soviets Say; Rains Aid Reds for Third Day; Many in Traps, Berlin Claims

Red Army Steadily Being Sliced Up And Encircled Bit By Bit, Nazis Says

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 20.—The German program of confusing, encircling, harassing, dividing and destroying the Red army entered its fifth week today with Russians trapped at many places on the great eastern front, the Hitler headquarters reported.

The Germans claimed to have inflicted "heavy, bloody losses" on Russian troops trying desperately to break out of German encirclement.

The communique said German and Rumanian troops were in "pursuit" of Russian forces after smashing their resistance on the east bank of the Dnestr River, on the southern wing of the front, that "additional successes" had been gained on the Finnish front, in the north, and that at the center, in the Smolensk region "operations continue according to plan."

That was the sum of the most official statement on the eastern front.

Belittle R. A. F. Attack

D. N. B., the official news agency, acknowledged the British had increased their air attacks on the Western front since Germany started the Russian campaign "to simulate relief" for the Russians, but that German defenses had held down the effectiveness of the R. A. F.

The agency said the British had lost 422 fighting and bombing planes during daylight raids on the channel coast region since June 18—116 in the last 10 days.

The high command said its planes bombed military facilities in middle and east England. After British cross-channel attacks of yesterday in which ten R. A. F. planes were destroyed—seven by pursuit planes and anti-aircraft fire, two by marine artillery and one by a patrol boat.

The British had attempted, the communique said, to attack the occupied channel region and the Norwegian coast. Last night the R. A. F. came back, dropping incendiaries and explosives "at a few places in northwest Germany, concentrating on Hanover."

Aim Is Confusion

Night chasers shot down one of the attackers, it was said, and "at no place were defense industries or military establishments damaged."

Military experts and other German sources added details to the brief official reports on the Russian campaign.

They said infantrymen and dust-covered tanks (the Russians re-

Guerrillas Taking Toll

By the United Press

Moscow (Monday), July 21.—The Red army command said today the German drives on Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev had been stalled in violent battles, following claims that a powerful Russian counterassault had recaptured an important city "with the initial S" in a complete rout of Nazi forces.

A Soviet communique covering the bitter fighting of Sunday as the titanic battle of Russia entered its fifth week, said that the Germans had been unable to make any "important" headway in their smashing attempts to break through and take Russia's three largest cities.

Claim Nazi Rout

The official army organ Red Star, reporting the victory that recaptured the city "with the initial S," described bitter hand-to-hand fighting in a Soviet encircling attack in which the Russians first seized the city then "pursued the decimated Germans with artillery and bayonets."

As the Germans fled westward in disorderly retreat, it was said, they abandoned vast booty, including tanks, cannon and armored cars.

Rain Still Falling

(Identification of the recaptured city as "S" raised speculation that Russian forces protecting Moscow might have recaptured the key city of Smolensk, 230 miles west of the Soviet capital. The German high command on Friday night announced the capture of Smolensk and Nazi spokesmen said Sunday that German panzer forces were "speeding on" to within less than 200 miles of Moscow along the broad highway from Smolensk.)

Today's war communique described the "violent fighting" which raged Sunday in fierce weather on the key fronts. For the third day in succession rain fell generally. Grim struggles were in progress on the Pskov Baltic front, the Polotsk-Nevel sector, around Smolensk and

Pope Is Ill From Fasting, Grief Over War

Nervous Exhaustion Attributed to Worry Over World Condition

By the United Press

Vatican City, July 20.—Informed Vatican circles tonight expressed anxiety over the health of Pope Pius XII, who for a week has been under the constant care of his personal physician, Dr. Galeazzi Lisi, due to "nervous exhaustion."

Vatican informants said that the Pontiff's physical condition has been undermined by his constant praying for peace and his deep concern over the sufferings caused by the war.

His nervous exhaustion, they said, threatens to become acute unless he follows more closely the advice of his doctor.

The Pope has refused to go to Castel Gandolfo, papal summer home in the mountains outside Rome, for a rest despite the urgings of his doctor and intimates, it was said.

However the Pontiff, who is 65 and has been on the papal throne slightly less than 29 months, has been prevailed upon to work in a cottage in a cool, shaded quarter of the Vatican Gardens away from the busy pontifical palace.

He is expected to move into the cottage tomorrow or Tuesday, it was said.

Dr. Lisi, also was said to have ordered the pontiff to reduce his audiences during the hot summer months, but the pontiff refused, saying he wished to be in constant touch with the faithful during "these troublous times."

It was understood that the Pope's nervous condition had been aggravated by his constant fasting and refusal to eat prescribed nourishing meals.

Bolivia Holds Army Officers In Nazi Plot

Former Finance Minister Arrested In Heart of Oil Fields

By the United Press

La Paz, Bolivia, July 20.—A number of Bolivian army officers were arrested at the Cochabamba garrison today on orders of Gen. Miguel Candia, defense minister, who flew there to investigate an alleged "Nazi putsch" which was thwarted by the declaration of a national state of siege.

An official announcement did not specify the reason for the arrests.

Earlier the arrests of four Bolivian civilians and several German residents, including Herman Schroth, former manager of the Lloyd Aero Boliviano, in a roundup of totalitarian sympathizers had been announced.

The La Paz police chief, announcing the arrests of Bolivian civilians and Germans, said Schroth "almost certainly" would be expelled.

By the Associated Press

La Paz, Bolivia, July 20.—Former Finance Minister Victor Paz Estenssoro was arrested today at Tarija, in the heart of the Bolivian oil fields.

Police said he was there "in connection with a Nazi putsch" which has thrown this country into a state of siege and resulted in an expulsion order against the German Minister.

A member of the Chamber of Deputies, Estenssoro was described by officials as head of the "Nationalist Revolutionary Movement," automatically ordered dissolved by proclamation of the state of siege last night. Many Selects Going AWOL, Wheeler Says

Wire Him on Holdover, He Adds; Tells of Mass Walkouts at 2 Camps

Senator Wheeler disclosed yesterday that he had received numerous protests against extension of one-year's service from selectees in camps over the country, as well as from Forts Meade and Dix units as revealed in The Post Sunday.

The isolationist leader also said selectees at two camps had sent him information that large bodies of privates had gone A. W. O. L. after their leaves had been revoked by their officers.

The names of the two camps where the alleged insubordination took place were not divulged. According to the telegrams to the Montana Senator, there were 124 men involved in one camp, 24 in the second.

Reported Unpunished

"The telegrams explained that no action was taken by the officers," Senator Wheeler said, "because the sentiments of the remaining men are with those who went on temporary leave."

A War Department spokesman said that steps would be taken for investigating the purported cases of men A. W. O. L. en masse. An inquiry is also expected into the selectees' letters protesting service extension under Army regulations which prohibit "efforts to procure or influence legislation affecting the Army or to procure a personal favor through legislation."

The protests, it was said at Senator Wheeler's office, came from such

Canal Barred, Japanese Ships To Round Horn

10 or More Reported Affected as Protest Evokes No Action

By the United Press

New York, July 20.—Ten or more Japanese steamers en route home from American Atlantic Coast ports have been ordered to abandon efforts to obtain permission to pass through the Panama Canal and proceed to Japan via Cape Horn, according to reports in Japanese shipping circles tonight.

Two of the vessels, according to a United Press dispatch from Cristobal, left Cristobal harbor Sunday afternoon for the long voyage around South America. One of them is beleived to be the O. S. K. Liner Tokai Maru, which reached Cristobal last Tuesday.

Canal authorities refused passage to the Japanese ships, is was said, on the grounds that the Canal was "undergoing repairs." American vessels, however, were being permitted passage, leading to a belief that works are under way which the Canal authorities do not wish to expose to Japanese eyes.

The Japanese embassy, which last week approached the State Department for permission for the Japanese vessels to pass through the Canal, was said to have abandoned its efforts and approved the instructions to masters of the ships to proceed via Cape Horn.

Some of the ships, it was said, still are in position where passage through the Canal would be welcomed if the American ban should

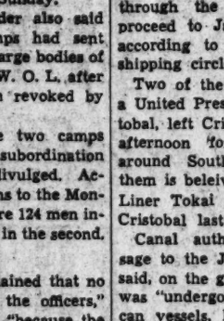
8 Suspects Held, Ninth Sought In Attack on Girl and Soldier

Eight suspects are being held by police and another is being sought in connection with the criminal assault upon an 18-year-old Washington girl and the slashing and beating of her escort, a Fort Meade soldier, Saturday night.

Private Lawrence McCullough, 32, a District selectee, is in Walter Reed Hospital suffering severe head injuries and cuts on his throat inflicted by a razor. McCullough and the girl were attacked on Paterson Woods Hill, in the 600 block New York Avenue Northeast. McCullough was first removed to Casualty Hospital and the girl to Gallinger Hospital for treatment.



MCCULLOUGH

The girl and soldier climbed to the top of the hill at about 8:30 p.m., and were watching the trains speed by along the New York Avenue railroad yards. It started to rain and they sought shelter among trees.

Soon afterwards, they were accosted by a heavily-built man, wearing dark pants, a sweater and cap. He told them he was a special police officer and demanded $5. The soldier told him he had only 15 cents. Whereupon the stranger slashed the serviceman's throat with a razor blade and beat him insensible with a rock. While McCullough was unconscious, the assailant attacked the girl.

She tentatively has identified a picture in police files as that of her assailant.

V's Put Up All Over Europe Nettle Nazis, British Report

By the Associated Press

London, July 20.—British propaganda's V for victory "Vlitzkrieg" opened on full scale today in stimulating the German-conquered peoples of the continent in their hopes, if not actual resistance, British authorities said tonight.

Reports received here said the challenging V symbols of victory and liberty with the slogan "Nedane se"—"We will not give in"—were scrawled on walls and fences throughout Czecho-Slovakia, and that accompanying acts of sabotage were increasing daily in this first non-German land to be occupied.

Reports from Paris, it was said, told of 6,200 "V" prosecutions by the German authorities there. Posters in which most of the words started with V have been scattered and pasted throughout the city, it was said, while at Bayonne the letter had mysteriously appeared on German automobiles.

"Mobilization of the 'V army' against Nazi Germany has been a complete success." Britain's mysterious radio announcer, "Col. Britton," declared tonight in a broadcast directed to all German-occupied countries.

"The results already have surpassed all expectations and the vast army stretches from one end of Europe to the other . . . the Germans now are bewildered and frightened."

V's in tar were reported daubed in front of the hotel at Nimes, France, while the same symbol was said to have been left mysteriously on the door of the Nazi

Nazis Slowed But Winning, Says Bern

Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, July 20.—After four weeks of war in Russia the Germans have won the battle of the frontiers and seem to be on the point of winning the battle of the Stalin line.

Their progress is certain and cannot be minimized, but the fact remains that "blitzkrieg" has been braked by the Russians. Such is the appraisal of the situation by competent observers here tonight.

At the latest news, the front appears to follow a fairly straight line from north to south apart from the significant bulge in the Smolensk sector—and Smolensk opens the road to Moscow. From Bialystok to Smolensk the distance is some 270 miles covered by the Germans in one month, no small achievement.

Now ther eare only 200 miles from Smolensk to Moscow. But when losses, wear and tear are considered the rate of speed should slacken, which fact induces experts to discount announcements of "sensational and imposing events on the morrow." In war the cautious commander believes that today is sufficient unto itself.

Napoleon's Fate Recalled

It is being recalled that in August, 1812, Napoleon, though generally cautious even in his daring, staked his fate on the morrow because each day he was losing in guerrilla warfare more men and material than he could well afford. His fate compelled him to seek ever new prodigious victories in order to stupefy to obedience the people he had vanquished—not to speak of his own.

The capture of Smolensk had opened for him the road to Moscow and he followed it. But his very advance had wrought the unity of the Russian nation. He marched through devastation and his grand army, formidable war machine though it was, broke down in the solitude whereupon winter came to mark the fall of a military empire.

In northern Russia winter follows hard on summer. Mid-September brings frosts to the Moscow region. The Russians have resisted one month. How many weeks can they stand? And of what reserves can they dispose?

Russians Erred at Start

In the meantime, observers here see the menace on Leningrad accentuated from three directions, while in a few days it is possible that Moscow will be threatened just as seriously. Nor should Kiev, the capital of the Ukraine, be overlooked. The loss of any one of these cities or of all three would be a hard blow, but would not of necessity end the resistance.

The Russian armies, in fact, are still handicapped by the initial error of the high command, which prepared to withstand in the south the main offensive which in reality developed many miles to the north. The retrieving of such a situation while never giving up resistance, may prove a superhuman task. Time alone will show.

Meanwhile losses on both sides continue to prove very heavy and communications difficult. The question of supplies tends more and more to dominate the situation. Reports from Bucharest, for instance, stress the necessity of bringing food into the conquered areas, all laid waste, in order that the people may not starve. Yet food is a minor problem compared with gasoline and the replacement of materiel which experts consider augment difficulties to the ratio of 20 to 1.

250,000 Tons Of Nazi Ships Sunk in 8 Days

By the Associated Press

London, July 20.—British bombers swooping to the height of masts scored two direct hits on a 7,000-ton Nazi tanker today, the British reported, bringing to nearly 250,000 tons the German vessels sunk or damaged in the last eight days of the R. A. F.'s protracted western air offensive.

Before today's attack, the British claimed 242,000 tons of Nazi shipping had been sunk or damaged in the last week, marked by two Saturday attacks on German convoys in which eight ships aggregating 48,000 tons were sunk or damaged.

The Air Ministry said reconnaissance planes reported the tanker was beached on the French Channel coast, down at the stern and a trail of oil drifting to the sea.

It was said effective fire from the bombers drove off three German planes guarding the ships after an earlier attack by Hurricane planes.

The R. A. F. made three daylight sweeps into northern France after a night attack on Hannover, in western Germany, but the Air Ministry said the weather did not favor large-scale operations.

British reports said large fires visible for miles were started in the industrial areas of Hannover.

The first daylight bomber formations, apparently aimed at points some distance inland from the French coast, flew high and crossed the coast at many points, filling the air for a long time with the roar of their motors.

Soon after they had returned in a steady stream, the second wave headed across the Strait in the direction of Boulogne, flying at only 1,000 feet. They apparently were making a new assault on German shipping.

Sunday strollers waved good luck as trailing fighters quickly overtook them and took up protective formations. This wave, too, soon returned in perfect order.

Last week was regarded as the most successful seven days of the war against German shipping.

An air ministry communique said four ships were hit and set blazing in a raid on an eight-ship convoy off the German island of Norderney Saturday. One, a 10,000-ton tanker, was set blazing from several hits, the bridge and superstructure of another 6,000-ton ship were blown away, and two other ships of 8,000 and 2,000 tons hit repeatedly and left burning, the air ministry said.

headquarters near Rouen.

French peasants were said to have originated a method of chalking the letter on their hands so that it is transferred to German soldiers' uniforms from a sly clap on the back.

It was reported that the Dutch and Belgiums had been impelled to especially bold manifestations.

A Reuters, British news agency, dispatch quoted the Bulgarian radio as saying European volunteers in the German war against Communist Russia were now wearing a V as a distinguishing mark standing for Nazi "viktoria."

But British commentators said ironically that more likely it stood for German vexation or the German word "verloren," which means "lost."

In Britain, where the psychological war was formerly launched early today, the symbol was exuberantly displayed on sidewalks, walls, automobile windshields—everywhere.

Women wore "V" hats and brooches, newspapers used the motif in their front-page make-up, cartoonists had a field day, hotel waiters laid the silver in V shapes, and dance bands played new V songs.

The German radio was heard here tonight countering the British campaign by assuring listeners that three V's mean veni, vidi, vici—the Latin for "I came, I saw, I conquered."

The German soldier has a greater right to use this phrase than had Caesar, declared the broadcaster.

Soviet Embassy Joins In

The Soviet Embassy in Washington last night joined—at least for purposes of identification — the British "V-for-Victory" campaign to mobilize anti-Nazi activity in occupied Europe.

An inquiring reporter misunderstood the initials of V. V. Pastoyev, the Embassy press attache, a Soviet official said, and the attache made clear his identity with the ejaculation:

"No! It's 'V'; 'V' for victory and again 'V' for victory!"

be relaxed. One of these is the Norfolk Maru of the Kawasaki K. K. Line which left Boston last week.

Informants said that five Japanese vessels were off Cristobal at noon Sunday awaiting permission to pass through the Canal. It was understood, however, that all of them would start for home via Cape Horn in the next 24 hours.

Vessels affected besides the Norfolk Maru and the Tokai Maru include the N. Y. K. Line's Asuka Maru, the K. K. K. Line's Kyosumi Maru, the Yamashita K. K.'s Yamasaki Maru and the Mitsui Line's Amagi-San Maru.

Loss of time because of the closing of the Canal to Japanese freighters it was said, already has cost the Japanese shipping lines thousands of dollars and will cost more thousands because of the added time for the via Cape Horn route.

The Informants confirmed reports that virtually all Japanese ships are being withdrawn from American Atlantic Coast services because of a shortage of bottoms in the Pacific and the assurance of greater earnings in Asiatic Coast runs and various routes of the trans-Pacific and South Pacific services.

Quitting South Africa

Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, July 20 (AP).—Japanese in the Union of South Africa were reported today packing in preparation for a rush home.

Officials at the Japanese legation would make no statement about reports from usually reliable sources that the preparations were the result of advice from Japan for her nationals to return.

The Japanese steamer Manila Maru is scheduled to sail from Durban July 26 and there were some indications the Japanese here, numbering several hundred, might leave on that boat.

Unconfirmed Here

State Department and Japanese Embassy officials in Washington were unable last night to confirm the reports of Japanese ships being ordered to proceed to Japan via Cape Horn.

The embassy last week asked the department for an explanation of delay in the scheduled sailing of two steamers tied up in the continental United States and one at Cristobal, Canal Zone. Acting Secretary of State Welles told a press conference that the ship at the Canal Zone was being delayed because of repairs, presumably to the Canal, and that routine inspection had postponed the scheduled sailings of the other two ships.

[The War Department said it had no information concerning the progress of repairs on the Canal.]

in the Novograd-Volynski region west of Kiev.

But at day's end, it was asserted, there were "no important changes in the position of the armies."

Despite the unfavorable weather the Red air fleet continued its blasting attacks on German panzer columns, planes and German airdromes behind the fighting front, destroying 25 German planes, it was stated.

[An Associated Press dispatch quoted the Russians as saying that at one point a Red infantry division surrounded and annihilated a large Nazi motorized formation, capturing 189 trucks, 5 tanks, 19 automobiles, 4 armored cars, 2 airplanes, 6 heavy cannon and several motorcycles, mortars, machine guns, a field radio station and a pontoon bridge depot.

[One hundred German vehicles were destroyed in this fight, it was asserted. Other sources said Soviet guerrillas were taking a terrific toll behind the Nazi lines.

[The Soviet communique told how at another point the Red army fell upon the Germans as they were concentrating trucks and artillery for an offensive.

[The Soviet unit destroyed 300 German trucks and 2 battalions of artillery and captured 30 trucks in good order along with many horses and much ammunition, the announcement stated.

[The communique said the railway track was blown up under a German ammunition train in the vicinity of the Slovakian town of Presov and 22 cars were destroyed. Forty-four German soldiers and officers were killed.]

In the Baltic Russian naval planes were said to have sunk another German destroyer, the third Russian naval-air victory reported from the Baltic in a week.

The reported stemming of the German drives spearheaded at Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev came only a few hours after Josef V. Stalin took over the commissariat of defense, a post which gave him supreme leadership over the vast Russian armed forces including direct administrative control of all war moves.

An announcement late Sunday disclosed that Stalin and the supreme Soviet, continuing a series of decrees tightening control of internal and defense forces, have combined the commissariats of home affairs and national security "because of wartime necessities."

The new combined commissariat, known as the "United NKVD," controls all internal affairs, the state security police and frontier guards.

The Red Star's account of the Russian victory at the City of "S" said it occurred when the Red army suddenly struck at the Germans holding the city in a frontal assault and on both flanks.

"Red armored units overcame superior German forces who fled in disorder," it was stated, and the Russians pressed on westward in relentless pursuit.

Sunday's morning high command communique told of "intensive fighting" on the key fronts.

Heavy fighting continued throughout the night in the Novograd-Volynski region where the Germans are attempting to smash through to the Ukrainian capital of Kiev and the Polotsk-Nevel region northwest of Smolensk, it was stated.

On the vital Leningrad front, it was stated, "nothing substantial occurred" Saturday night and early Sunday, and other sectors including the southern Bessarabian front also appeared to have been stabilized with the Russian lines holding firm.

Heavy attacks by the Red Air Force on enemy tanks and panzer forces were reported and it was stated that on Friday the Russian Air Force destroyed 71 German planes instead of 32 as previously announced.

The encirclement and "annihilation" of 1,500 Germans who attempted to seize a Russian town identified only as "X" was described in a supplement to Sunday's morning communique.

The communique also described the destruction of an elaborately camouflaged German airdrome behind the front lines by a Russian air squadron.

"Only shapeless heaps of debris remained of the smashed enemy bombers," it was stated.

On the northern Finnish front, it was stated, six boats loaded with Finnish troops were completely destroyed when 10 boatloads of Finnish soldiers attempted to land in the rear of the Russian troops who let the enemy boats approach close to the shore and then opened murderous machine gun fire.

Near Shlobin, it was stated, 35 German soldiers and a non-commissioned officer deserted to the Russian lines saying they were "dead tired" and that the German strength was being sapped by Russian resistance.

German prisoners were represented as being gloomy.

Sunday's communique asserted that Premier Gen. Ion Antonescu of Rumania, whom it described "a Hitlerite flunkey," had been instructed to form new shocktroops from "thieves, brigands and other rabble" because of tremendous losses suffered by the Rumanian troops on the Bessarabian front.

Reds Scorch Ladoga Area

London, July 20 (AP).—The German radio in a broadcast from Helsinki tonight said "vast territories" had been set afire by retreating Russians in the Lake Ladoga area, and that fires could be seen from the Finnish lines.

The broadcast said the Russians had applied the "scorced earth" policy to all the territory they had to vacate, that the population had been removed entirely, and that Finnish troops were entering empty villages.

New British Planes Outfly Nazi Fighters

By the United Press

London, July 20.—Britain's improved fighting planes, which now can fight at 7½-miles altitude, should give the Royal Air Force a marked advantage over the most recent German fighter craft, according to Oliver Stewart, British aviation expert.

The new British craft, reported to have a ceiling of 40,000 feet while loaded with full military equipment, can rise almost a mile higher than present types and will have an advantage of more than 2,000 feet over the new German Messerschmitt 109-F, Stewart said, though this latest Messerschmitt was "expressly designed for use at great height."

"The estimated ceiling of this machine," he said, "is thought to be less than these new R. A. F. machines. It has been given as between 35,000 and 38,000 feet. If these figures are proven to be right in practice the R. A. F. stratosphere fighters will have an advantage of a couple of thousand feet or so over their adversaries.

Height Is Important

"That is not a very big advantage, but height is so important in air fighting that it should be enough. No details have yet been given about the high-flying British fighters, but it seems that they are not new types, but a modification of the existing fighters.

"Pilots will have a hard time when they fight at around 38,000 feet because one has to assume that they are hindered by oxygen apparatus, and are not housed in pressure cabins or pressure suits. But this much can be said, that so long as we can fly higher than the Germans we shall have a good chance to give our bombers strong daylight protection when they go over to attack early."

Stewart also discussed bombing plane manufacture, answering queries as to why it might not be more economical to manufacture many small bombers rather than few large ones.

Ease Traffic Problem

"The point is not what each machine costs in man hours to work," he said, "but the man hours that go into the whole task of conveying a given weight of bombs to a given point and discharging it there and returning.

"When you look at it in that way, you find that the very big bombers are not so expensive in the first place. One may carry a load of bombs equal to that of three smaller machines. It will therefore ease the airdrome traffic problems at night, for only one-third the number of aircraft will have to take off and land at a given rate of attack at a given time.

"They will also use fewer trained men. It may be that the number of trained men required to carry a given load will be a good deal less than half the number required when many small machines are used. All these things tend to balance increased man hours in workshop."

Duff Cooper Sent to Orient As Coordinator

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), July 21.—Alfred Duff Cooper was dispatched to the Far East today as a special war coordinator for the British cabinet.

He relinquished his ministry of information portfolio to Brendan Bracken, 40, who has been Prime Minister Churchill's parliamentary private secretary.

Famous as the empire's No. 1 secret-keeper, Bracken is a former editor who is known to have been critical in times past of the oftenberated information ministry.

The exact details of Duff Cooper's new job were not disclosed, but it has been reported he is headed for Singapore, which would be the hottest spot in the Orient in the event of a Japanese thrust southward.

Job Is Like Lyttleton's

His duties were described as similar to those recently entrusted to Capt. Oliver Lyttleton as coordinator in the Middle East. The importance of Lyttleton's job is indicated by the fact that he holds war cabinet rank as special minister of state.

A number of other changes announced at the same time included ones in the presidency of the board of education, paymaster general, and various under-secretaryships.

Other appointments were announced as follows:

Richard Austen Butler, 38, president of the Board of Education.

Lord Hankey to be paymaster general, a position which is now vacant.

Ernest Thurtle, 50, who was born in Port Jervis, N. Y., parliamentary secretary for the ministry of information.

Edwin Duncan Sandys, 31, Churchill's son-in-law, financial secretary to the war office.

Richard Kidston Law, 40, parliamentary undersecretary of state for the foreign office. Law, a son of Bonar Law, formerly worked as a newspaperman in the United States.

Herwald Ramsbotham, now president of the board of education, is to become chairman of the unemployment assistance board to succeed Lord Rushcliffe, who has retired. Ramsbotham was named a baron.

3 Join Privy Council

Sir Hugh Seely, 42, who formerly commanded a bomber squadron, as an additional parliamentary undersecretary of state at the air ministry.

Churchill selected Col. George Steven Harvie Watt to fill Bracken's former secretarial post.

Three new members of the King's Privy Council, which advises his majesty on affairs of government and state, likewise were named. They are H. H. Balfour, parliamentary undersecretary of state for the air ministry; Tom Williams, joint parliamentary secretary for the ministry of agriculture, and Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, parliamentary secretary for the ministry of food.

ported general rainfall on the front) were engaged in extremely complicated tactics. The purpose of these chessboard maneuvers across the expansive plains from Leningrad to Kiev was to prevent orderly withdrawal of Soviet forces.

The German command was determined to allow as little as possible of the Russian army to "retreat to the Urals"—Europe's natural boundary in Rusia—or to safety far behind Moscow where reorganization might be attempted, these sources said.

Playing a conspicuous role in the game of confusing Russia was the air force. D.N.B. said German pursuit planes, presumably not fully occupied by fighting off the Russian air force, were joining bombers in attacks on Russian ground forces.

The agency said that "a large number of trains were blasted from tracks and that rail lines had been broken in many additional places" in another phase of the Luftwaffe offensive.

A portion of the air force assigned to the Russian front also scouted the Baltic, it was reported, and sighted Russian naval forces near Dago Island, Estonian territory.

One destroyer was set afire and two others seriously damaged, it was said.

The reference to actions at sea was one of the few mentions of the Russian navy since the eastern campaign started. The report gave rise to the question of whether the Germans were getting around to the Russian Baltic bases, the chief of which is Kronstadt, off Leningrad harbor.

British Claim New Tank Is World's Best

By the Associated Press

London, July 20.—A new heavy tank which is now being produced in British factories has been named the Churchill.

A ministry of supply announcement said "the Churchills are probably the most formidable fighting instrument possessed by any army in the world. They are heavily armored, giving maximum protection to the crews, but despite their weight they are able to move over any kind of ground at startling speed.

"Terrific gunpower is concentrated in a minimum of space. It is unlikely that many enemy machines exist which could stand up for long to their devastating fire.

"If for any reason the Churchills were brought to a standstill, the thickness of their armor would enable them to be used as small fortresses or strong points.

"Details of the construction of the new tanks are some of the most closely guarded secrets in arms manufacture today.

"The prime minister is one of the very few civilians who have ridden in the type of tank which has been named after him. He took his seat at the control lever and was astonished at the ease with which the machine could be maneuvered. Despite its great bulk it turns around almost with the ease of a taxicab."

The weight of the new heavy tank was not disclosed.

Italian Trains Crash, 30 Killed

Rome, July 20 (AP).—About 30 persons were killed and 50 injured last night when a passenger train crashed into a freight between Como San Giovanni and Albate Camerlata, on the Milan-Chiasso line. The 11-car train was carrying workmen to Germany.

2 British Subs And Destroyer Sunk, Italy Says

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 20.—Italian submarines and destroyers in a series of actions in the Mediterranean sank two British submarines and a destroyer, the Italian war bulletin said today, while torpedo planes hit a 10,000-ton British cruiser.

One Italian submarine has failed to return from the Atlantic, the communique said.

The British destroyer was finished by a torpedo from an Italian submarine, the communique said, while another Italian submarine accounted for one of the British submarines.

Stefani, the official Italian news agency, said the other British submarine was sunk by Italian destroyers which dropped depth bombs in the Indian sea. The British warship had fired two torpedoes at one of the destroyers, but missed, the news agency said.

The cruiser was attacked off Matruh, the British railhead in Egypt, the communique said.

In other action, the high command reported the British had bombed Gondar, the Lake Tana region stronghold in Ethiopa and Bengasi and Tripoli in Libya while the Italians bombed Malta air bases.

Axis planes again attacked barracks and sandbagged fortifications around Tobruk where artillery fire was unchanged.

U. S. Bomber Output Doubled

By Robert M. Jackson
Associated Press Staff Writer

Production of two-engine bombers was nearly doubled in the first six months of this year, defense officials said yesterday in disclosing that gains in the output of combat planes had been far greater than indicated by the announced increases in manufacturing of all types of aircraft.

Published figures of the Office of Production Management, which do not designate types, show aircraft production increased 42 per cent from January to June.

It was learned in other authoritative quarters, however, that two-engine bomber production gained 92 per cent, output of one-engine dive and torpedo bombers 146 per cent and that of pursuit, observation and other military aircraft, 142 per cent.

At the same time it was announced that the number of civil airplane pilots in the United States increased more than 100 per cent in the past year.

Brig. Gen. Donald H. Donnolly, administrator of civil aeronautics, reported that there were 82,277 certified pilots on July 1, compared with 41,006 a year earlier. The increase was attributed chiefly to the pilot training program of the CAA.

Many Parts Required

Only in the heavy bomber class—the giant four-motored craft—was there no appreciable gain in the six months. Some defense officials attributed this to delays in obtaining certain parts. More than 20,000 different parts are required for one of the planes, not including those in the engines.

Officials said these difficulties had been overcome and indicated that an appreciable increase in production might be expected soon.

The incomplete story told by plane production totals has been acknowledged by OPM officials. One of them commented recently that to say only that a certain number of planes was produced each month was as unenlightening as to say that this country produced so many vehicles without distinguishing between bicycles, automobiles, and locomotives.

Figures on the output of various categories of planes have been withheld, of course, for military reasons.

January plane output was 1,036 craft, but there are indications that a large proportion of the total was light trainer planes.

Totals Since January

Since then the monthly totals have been:

February 972; March 1,216; April 1,389; May 1,334 and June 1,476.

It was learned authoritatively that approximately half of the June production was combat, as distinguished from trainer planes.

The two-engine bombers weigh 28,000 to 30,000 pounds and defense officials assert that "a substantial proportion" of them have been delivered to the British.

Reports from abroad, they said, are to the effect that the planes have proved very satisfactory and that they have been an important weapon in the R. A. F.

British Hasten To Make Syria A Stronghold

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Beirut, Lebanon, July 20.—British and Free French forces hastened today to convert conquered Syria and Lebanon into a great Near East defensive bulwark lest they become another Crete.

Although fighting is over, war materials still are pouring in and fortifications are being strengthened to meet any possibility of the Germans following up their Russian drive with a push southward into these lands of antiquity.

Recruiting Vichy Forces

The army which conquered this French mandate is remaining here to garrison the country and is being increased by recruits from the Vichy French forces. Some of these are Frenchmen who have decided to support the De Gaulle Free French movement; others are professional fighters like the Senegalese and Foreign Legionnaires.

The country is busy adjusting itself to the new regime with the promise of independnece after the war. Authority at present is divided three ways.

First there is the British military command, the country being under martial law, with British military tribunals established to deal with any offense against the peace.

Then there is the Free French General Georges Catroux, who as high commissionor exercises the same sort of civil authority the former French mandate officials did.

Axis Nationals Rounded Up

Lastly there are the Syrian and Lebanese governments, which are carrying on with personnel unchanged, although their powers have been sharply curtailed ever since the war began.

German and Italian nationals still are being rounded up, those regarded as dangerous being sent to the concentration camps which the Vichy French had established for pro-British Syrians and British prisoners during the short military campaign.

Supplies now arrive regularly and in bulk from Palestine, and prices, which once were exorbitant, have fallen greatly. For example, gasoline, which sold for three dollars a gallon, is down to 50 cents.

Four newspapers—two of them mentioned in Washington's Axis black list—were suspended, and several persons were arrested as swift government action last night was declared to have thwarted a Nazi revolutionary plot.

Ernst Wendler, the German Minister, who was expected to leave the country within a week, was said by a government source to have provided "a channel of communications between a Bolivian military man now in Germany and young army officers here who favor a totalitarian form of government."

Wendler was ordered last night to get out of Bolivia, but officials said no deadline had been fixed.

Asks to See Documents

A German Legation spokesman in a statement declared Wendler was asking the government to show him the documents charging his alleged participation in any plot.

La Paz itself was quiet and many provinces were unaware even today of the developments in the capital.

Montevideo, Uruguay, July 20. (AP)—A Government order became effective today suspending the pro-Nazi pewspaper Libertad (Liberty) for ten days for an article attacking the Congress.

Chile Studies Plot Evidence

Santiago, Chile, July 20 (AP).—Chilean army chiefs are studying documents purporting to show existence of "a Nazi plot" in Chile, the newspaper La Critica reported today.

The newspaper reported the documents were discovered by police investigators and turned over to the military. They were described as including plans and maps of Chilean electric plants, railway stations and army garrisons.

Police also are investigating a mysterious truck which was said to have transported arms to Santiago from southern Chile where a large number of German settlers live, the newspaper said.

paign oratory.'

"Frankness and candor compel me to say that in the last national election only one of the candidates for President has been loyal and consistent to his preelection polices and promies, and that was the candidate of the Socialist Party, Norman Thomas."

Landon insisted that, "For the sake of national morale, the President must advise the Congress definitely what unforseen events have caused him to change his statements of even two months ago" that "the boys would be sent home at the end of the year."

Blames Labor Leaders

The former Kansas Governor asserted that the Administration's next step would be removal of the prohibition against sending of selectees or National Guardsmen outside of the Western Hemisphere.

"If the President is to blame for trying to hoodwink the American people, so are his fellow conspirators, including members of his Cabinet," Landon exclaimed.

"Then there are certain labor leaders. These know—the tops at least—that Mr. Roosevelt is heading for war, and that if we get into war social gains will be sacrificed. Yet John Lewis is the only national labor leader who has the guts to stick his neck out and tell labor what is going to happen to it.

"Finally, what are those Democratic members of Congress going to do who promised never, never, never would they vote to send an American boy to fight in Europe—let alone Asia and Africa and the seven seas.

"This political chicanery, this hoodwinking of the American people, is the enemy that is flooding our homes, at one of the six most critical times in our national life."

Pop Out

Cavalry Bans Soft Drinks at Maneuvers

With the First Cavalry Division in the Desert, July 20 (AP).—The Army officially made known its displeasure today over ubiquitous ice cream and soft drink trucks which even have followed the cavalry onto the desert for maneuvers.

Maj. Gen. Innis P. Swift, commander of the First Cavalry Division, said in a critique that the presence of such vending establishments was one of the current woes of the Army.

"The soldiers drink and eat this stuff and then write home that they can't stand the Army ration," Gen. Swift said in banning such sellers' appearance in the 24-square-mile maneuver area.

"If they eat the Army ration, they can take this hard work, but they can't do it on ice cream and pop."

Not a Majority, He Says

The Senator refused to allow a Post representative to see the telegrams, but he said he would quote some of the letters in the Senate this week in opposing Selective Service extension.

He emphasized that he did not believe the protests represented a majority sentiment among the selectees.

A member of the Senator's secretarial staff said that most of the telegrams were signed by single selectees. Some, however, bore the names of a number of soldiers, or the name of a unit.

Says Generals Express Views

Senator Wheeler declared he did not favor service men expressing their views on all forms of legislation, but added:

"I don't know why the men shouldn't have just as much right to protest the legislation which so directly affects them as do the generals to manifestly urge this legislation, which will not affect them as it does the men in the ranks."

Discussing the service of selectees, the Democratic legislator said:

"There is no question but what we have got to have a strong Army. But in order to have a strong Army we must have men who are satisfied. A high morale among the men must be maintained.

"Probably the big majority of the selectees now in the Army are willing to stay for more than one year. The important thing is to find out whether the men feel we are breaking faith with them. In any case, those who are already in should be allowed to make a choice now of whether they want to stay longer than one year.

"But it should be made clear that those who are coming up for service may have to serve for more than one year."

Note Found in Street

A correspondent for The Post in Fredericksburg yesterday found a note apparently dropped on a street of the Virginia community, which the Forty-fourth Division passed through en route to maneuvers from Fort Dix, N. J., last week.

The note said:

"Forty-fourth Division. One year's enough: Send this to your newspaper. Who the hell is Maj. Gen. Williams to say the National Guard wouldn't mind staying another year?

"No one I know was asked. Why not take a vote among the National Guard?"

The reference was to Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard bureau in Washington, who on July 3 said that as a result of an extensive tour of training areas he had found "a loyal willingness on the part of all ranks to continue their service as long as the Nation needs them in the present emergency."

It was established that more than a score of the notes were picked up in Fredericksburg yesterday by pedestrians.

Message on Selects to Be Broadcast

however, that the measure probably would pass with a safe margin.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley, of Kentucky, said yesterday that despite the opposition he was sure the project would be approved.

The Columbia Brodacasting System announced last night that, despite its rule against playing recordings, it would reproduce the President's message at 2:30 p. m., over the entire system and would rebroadcast it over WJSV at 8:30 p. m.

The President is expected to amplify his press conference of Tuesday that the Army built up over the past months will disintegrate if it becomes necessary to discharge the selectees and the National Guardsmen at the end of their designated year of service.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, likewise has warned that unless the proposed legislation is enacted the Army will have a difficult time properly manning the outlying bases.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee, headed by Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, will hear opponents as well as proponents of the Service Act amendment proposals at its meeting at 10 a. m. today.

Opposition witnesses listed include Oswald Garrison Villard, representing the Keep America Out of War Congress; Miss Fay Bennett, representing the Youth Committee Against War; Frank Olmstead, of the War Registers League, and Merwin K. Hart, of the New York State Economic Council.

Scheduled to appear in support of the proposed extended-service legislation are three representatives of the Citizens Military Training Camps Association — Greenville Clark, New York lawyer; Brig. Gen. John McCauley Palmer, U. S. A., retired, and Col. Archibald G. Thacher. Clark is credited, with Henry L. Stimson, now Secretary of War, with a large part in promoting the original Selective Service Act, which it is now sought to amend.

Senate Democratic Whip Lister Hill, of Alabama, predicted the committee would conclude hearings quickly and file a report before the end of the week. He previously forecast adoption of a joint resolution declaring the national safety to be imperiled, thereby meeting the conditions under the Selective Service Act which would permit keeping the men in service.

The Administration already has dropped, for the time being, the companion proposal to lift the restriction against sending selectees and Guardsmen outside this hemisphere.

The "draft property bill before the Senate today will be in charge of Senator Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky. Senator Reynolds, chairman of the Military Committee, which reported the measure, told the Associated Press that he was unable to join in recommending speedy passage of the legislation and therefore had designated Chandler to conduct the bill's trip through the Senate. Reynolds said he feared the powers granted to the President under the bill might be so broad as to permit seizure of newspaper plants and radio stations if they were deemed necessary to the defense program.

The measure would authorize the President, when other means of obtaining the property have been exhausted and there was an immediate need for it, to requisition:

"Any military or naval equipment, supplies or munitions, or components thereof, or machinery, tools or materials necessary for the manufacture, servicing or operation of such equipment, supplies or munitions"

The owner would be paid "fair and just compensation."

Even Newsmen To Face 'Peril' In Mock War

When the Army in September concentrates half a million men in Louisiana for the Nation's greatest peace-time war game, newspaper and radio reporters and cameramen will be subject to capture and 24-hour imprisonment if they fail to obey the Army's new rules for correspondents.

The new rules for covering the war game are one of many innovations announced by the War Department yesterday through which the September maneuvers which for the first time will not follow a preconceived scenario plan of operation, will be made as realistic as possible.

The days are gone when a reporter could wander as he wished across the battle lines, calling first at the headquarters of the opposing forces and campaigning with troops of the Blues in the morning and with the Reds in the afternoon. Combat intelligence officers would like to waylay them and confiscate their notes and pictures.

In this year's mock war, the correspondent will no longer be the complete neutral. He must choose sides. If he gets "off-side" he will be arrested as an enemy alien. He may be detained as long as 24 hours to prevent him from disclosing any secret.

The new conditions are inherent in the realistic field training planned by general headquarters. In past years a maneuver scenario was planned in advance. It, like the script of a play, described the operations of both sides. The director knew in advance which side would have the upper hand at the moment he ended the "war."

In the free maneuver, however, the commander who shows the best enterprise and tactical sense will win the battle.

His command will not be restricted to certain boundaries. If he advances too far he will not be compelled to move his troops back in order to preserve a set pattern in time and space, as was done under the old method. He will drive forward as far as his capabilities will take him, as in actual warfare. Front line umpires will judge the success or failure of every action.

Duce Is Shot At By Monarchist, Moscow Reports

New York, July 20 (INS).—An attempt on the life of Premier Mussolini of Italy was reported tonight by the Moscow radio, quoting dispatches from the Italo-German frontier.

A monarchist officer, the Moscow announcer said, fired two shots at the Italian dictator when he was reviewing troops getting ready to leave for the eastern front from Farrara. As picked up in New York by C. B. S., the Moscow bulletin said the officer was "allied to the anti-German opposition group headed by Starace and Muti."

(Editor's note: Ettore Muti, powerful within Fascist inner party circles, formerly was secretary of the Fascist Party. He went to the Albanian front and was reported killed flying against the Greeks. However, the report was later established as false. Muti was succeeded as Fascist Party secretary earlier this year by Adelchi Serene. (Achille Starace formerly was assistant secretary of the Fascist Party.)

Four Senators Hotly Debate Draft Limit

Whether the service of Uncle Sam's 600,000 selectees should be extended beyond a year, was the topic last night in a hot four-man Senatorial debate broadcast to the nation via Station WOL on Theodore Granik's American Forum of the Air.

In favor of the military service extension were Senators Claude Pepper, of Florida, and Harley M. Kilgore, of West Virginia, Democrats, and against the proposal were Senators Raymond E. Willis, of Indiana, and Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, Republicans.

"No Contract" with Selectees

Senator Pepper told the audience that "there was no contract" between the selectes and the Government.

"These men did not enlist for a year," he said. "They were required by law to enter the service, and the law can require them to serve longer than a year in a declared emergency."

Senator Kilgore said that some of the Regular Army and National Guard units "are composed of as much as 80 per cent selectees."

"It should be plain and evident that the time foreseen by the clause in the law providing for the holding of selectees, has arrived," he asserted.

Senator Wiley took the opposite view.

Answers With Question

"Have you stopped beating your wife?" he asked jokingly of Senator Kilgore after the later had asked why Wiley voted against certain military appropriation measures.

When the questioning continued, Wiley retorted hotly: "No Senator can question the integrity or the decision of another member in the Senate. Why don't we live up to those rules here?"

The Wisconsin Senator told the audience that "the reason our Army isn't fully trained is because this Nation hasn't the tanks, the ordnance, the antitank guns, the antiaircraft guns, and no one can say when that equipment will be on hand.

"When this equipment is ready for the conscripts who have had the preliminary training, they can be called back into service," he concluded.

Willis Agrees

Agreeing was Senator Willis, who quoted Gen. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, on the importance of morale.

"If the draftees are forced to remain in service past this one year in which they were led to regard as the maximum, they can hardly be expected to demonstrate the best of morale," he stated.

"But if on the other hand," he added, "those who favor the time extension believe the men's morale is all it should be, does it not follow that adequate troops would be supplied by draftees willing to volunteer additional time?"

Native to Be Envoy From India Here

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, July 20.—For the first time, India will shortly be represented in the United States by diplomatic agents-general. The British government and the Marquess of Lithingow, Viceroy of India, announced today the appointment of Sir Girja Shankar Bajpai, member of the governor general's executive council, to the post in Washington.

Sir Girja, who has long been an Indian civil servant, will probably go to the United States early in the fall. Washington will shortly appoint a diplomatic agent to India, it was said here.

[The State Department merely said last night that no announcement had been made here on the subject. —Editor's note.]

Break With Tradition

Officials in London, while admitting that the appointment of an Indian as his country's diplomatic representative abroad represented a foreshadowed Dominion status for India.

London authorities said frankly that Sir Girja's appointment was brought about by the rapid increasing demands of the war on the entire empire. India, with her four-hundred million inhabitants, is rapidly becoming the supply center for all Empire forces east of Suez. India has sent thousands of Indian troops, fully armed to Iraq, to Malaya and to the war zones in Africa and Palestine, as well as some to Britain herself. The number of these is a well kept military secret, but for service in India alone the country has started on the recruiting and equipping of another 500,000 men to add to a special war recruitment of 500,000 made already. Gun production in India is now 5 times greater than in peacetime and the making of shells has risen 24 times.

Lease-Lend Aid Foreseen

The British forces in India now commanded by Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, also will doubtless receive many supplies from America under the Lease-Lend Act which makes the exchange of diplomatic agents between India and the United States particularly important, it was said here.

An early announcement on the expansion of India's defense council is expected from L. S. Amery, secretary for India, in the Churchill cabinet. It was reported, however, that the Indian National Congress, whose chief leader is Mohandas Gandhi, still refuses to lend his backing to British pleas for support of the war.

Sir Girja attended the Washington Arms Conference in 1921 and 1922 as an Indian representative. He will be the first Indian to represent his country outside the empire however, as a fully accredited diplomat.

'Block Parties' Raise Funds for Soldiers

BROOKLYN NEIGHBORS pitch in these days to give 'block parties' to raise fun money for their boys in camps. Ordinarily a quiet businessman, the fellow at left ran a game under his own apple tree with all the confidence of a county fair spieler. Mothers sold their cakes too. Three thousands persons came to this party which raised $1,000

OATMEAL was used to give concrete pavement a surface for dancing. Two of the hometown heroes are shown dancing. The Army and Navy got in free

THIS WAS THE dancing scene at the Brooklyn party from afar as hundreds danced in the street so men in the service can have fun too

Axis Soldiers Shoot Each Other in Greece

Copyright by New York Times

Ankara, July 20.—A situation resembling a mild form of anarchy is developing in Greece, according to travelers arriving in Turkey today.

While food speculation is rife and profiteering enormous, the Greek people are suffering from the beginnings of famine and plague and the Greek puppet government can do nothing about it.

Athens now has only one restaurant which serves meat dishes, according to this information, and this restaurant is reserved almost exclusively for German and Italian officers and soldiers and the few foreigners who have sufficient funds to pay the stiff prices demanded.

Nazis and Italians Clash

Despite the existence of the Greek food control ministry, all food is in the hands of the Germans and Italians, who are profiteering on bread, rice, potatoes, sugar, beans and lentils. Sugar is enormously expensive, according to the travelers, but it can be had. Cholera has broken out in the Piraeus, they said.

Incidents have occurred between German and Italian soldiers and the relations of troops of these Axis partners are increasingly strained, it is reported. German food and travel permits are sometimes refused by the Italians, and Italian permits in nearly every case are dismissed as "worthless" by the Germans.

Since the government is without authority, even for the issuance of civil regulations, there is a kind of anarchy in Athens, making for confusion and dissatisfaction, quite apart from Greek contempt for the Italians and the hatred they bear the Germans, these travelers said.

One of the travelers told of a shooting incident between Italian and German soldiers, after which both German and Italian army ambulances came for the casualties. The traveler was unable to learn how many soldiers were involved or how badly the participants were wounded.

Other Incidents

There had been other minor incidents, he said, but after this shooting German officers sought to keep their men segregated in public places away from the Italians. The Germans, he said, are vastly amused by Italian manners and profess amusement as well for the Italian uniforms and decorations. This attitude, he said, has been responsible for several clashes between German and Italian soldiers.

Food speculation in the hands of the German and Italian food control authorities is running wild, these travelers reported, and prices asked for staple foods have risen four and five times over their normal or even wartime levels.

Fish, which used to be plentiful, is now expensive and hard to get. Food cards are to be had from the Italians and Germans only after submission to endless formalities—unless the Athenian is prepared to engage in bribery.

"A handful of drachmas works wonders," said the traveler, "and it takes a handful now. The 'Black Bourse' (illegal exchange) is fantastic now. One dollar, 700 drachmas." He said that one gold pound might bring as much as 25,000 drachmas in the Black Bourse.

German and Italian soldiers and officers, said the traveler, are circulating thousands of Italian banknotes, printed in Italian and Greek and made in Italy in August, 1940, just a trifle more than two months before Italy invaded Greece last year. The new Italian banks in Athens, according to this information, are dealing openly with Black Bourse operators in an effort to get control of all gold on the Athens market.

The Tsolakoglu government, it is reported, is powerless to halt this speculation.

Agriculture Dept. Acts on Complaints Of Wheat Penalties

The Agriculture Department yesterday took another step toward meeting the complaints of farmers against the 49-cents-a-bushel penalty established for wheat production in excess of quotas.

It announced that provisions whereby farmers who have stored excess 1941 wheat under the marketing quota may seed below their 1942 acreage allotments and obtain release of the stored wheat for marketing without penalty.

Winter wheat farmers who do no spring seeding thus may be able to convert their excess wheat to free wheat and sell it late this fall.

Defense No Relief To Rural Poverty, Baldwin Testifies

By International News Service

The defense boom is not relieving poverty in rural districts, C. B. Baldwin, Farm Security Administrator, told the Toland committee investigating interstate migration Saturday.

One important factor in agricultural poverty is that "millions of acres" are being taken over for Army camps and defense factories.

"As a result of the purchase of these great tracts, thousands of farm families have been displaced," Baldwin declared. "The FSA has assisted in the relocation of nearly 9,000 of these families."

Turks Greet British in Syria By 'Very Good'

By Russell Hill

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

On the Syrian-Turkish Border, July 18 (Delayed).—British and Turkish troops greeted each other in a symbolic gesture here today as the Allied occupation of Syria's strategic points was completed by a motorized column which had advanced northward from Aleppo.

Following the armored cars of the motorized unit, I drove here with several British officers and correspondents.

The British armored cars passed the Syrian customs house, and continued 4 miles, until they reached Bourn, which marks the end of Syrian territory and the beginning of Turkish. From the customs house on the other side of the line Turkish soldiers marched up the road. At the border they came to attention, saluted and then shook hands, smilingly, with the men who clambered down from the armored vehicles.

Cigarettes were exchanged, but language difficulties interfered with a free flow of conversation. The Turkish troops, however, managed English well enough to say: "England—Turkey—very good."

Of interest here is the fact the British are leaving the frontier in control of those who were in charge while Gen. Henri Dentz ruled as high commissioner. A similarly anomalous situation prevails in Aleppo. Although the town has been occupied by the British, Vichy officers and men continue to move about freely.

There are still some 5,000 members of the French army and 1,900 members of the French air force here. Eventually they will return to France, but in the meantime they continue to walk about the streets without hindrance, wearing their uniforms and insignia.

On the trip up here with the British correspondents, I paused at Baalbek, about 50 miles northeast of Beirut. The devastation caused by the war was overshadowed by the ruins of the ancient Roman temples. Six great columns still stand amid the mass of broken stones. In Homs, farther to the north, could be seen the effects of the Royal Air Force raids. Railway buildings and installations were wrecked, but the remainder of the town seemed intact.

Radio Club Outing Produces 2 for British Technical Corps

The British government obtained recruits for its Civilian Technical Corps during the Washington Radio Club's annual watermelon feast at the Miller Cabin in Rock Creek Park yesterday.

They were Richard Dominelli, 25, 1923 K Street Northwest, and Joseph Shiavi, 25, 2524 L Street Northwest. To the outing group of more than 100, Group Captain A. F. Lang, M. B. C., A. F. C., attached now to the British Consulate General, 25 Broadway, New York City, said:

"Anyone who has been trained in radiolocation in war will find himself years ahead of those who only learn it in schools or in peace time. After the war, radiolocation is going to be of incalculable importance—one of the great industries of the future. So the Civilian Technical Corps provides an opportunity to get in on the ground floor . . . . If any of you go over you will find yourself working with the best fellows in the world, with tastes and outlook the same as yours."

The corps, literature explained, is a nonmilitary body of paid volunteer craftsmen in certain skilled trades open to United States citizens, established by the British government to maintain and repair highly technical equipment used by the British military, naval and air forces. Free board and living quarters are provided, with clothing. Salaries range from $24.12 a week for basic workers to $38.65 a week for chief foremen. Volunteers requiring instruction will receive $21.11 a week for a period not exceeding a month from enrollment.

Work in radiolocation, whose technical aspects the group captain could not explain for reasons of secrecy, "is enormously interesting," he said. "You will find a certain amount of adventure and thrill. You will certainly lead a life of great interest and you will be able to feel that you are playing a vital part in upsetting Hitler's plans to conquer both England and America."

England, he said, is the only place where technicians at present can get any training in radiolocation.

Rise Against U.S., Nazis Urge Iceland

New York, July 20 (AP).—The Berlin radio quoted Scandinavian newspapers in a special broadcast to Iceland today as suggesting that "Icelanders rise up and throw down the burden of the American occupation." The program was heard here by N. B. C.

Greek King Hints He'll Move to London

London, July 20 (U.P.).—Movement of the Greek government-in-exile to London was indicated today in exchanges of messages between British and Greek officials which revealed that King George of Greece and his prime minister, Manuel Tsouderos, are expected here from South Africa in the near future.

Prime Minister Churchill sent the King a message expressing deep admiration for his courage after the Nazi conquest of Greece, adding:

"The warmest welcome awaits you here, where all are resolved to conquer or perish."

The monarch replied:

"I am looking forward to meeting you and my many friends in England."

"I hope before long to have the honor of making your acquaintance here in London and discussing with you further measures for prosecution of our joint war effort," Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said in a message to Tsouderos.

Tsouderos replied:

"I am certain our collaboration will be particularly fruitful and rejoice at the idea of meeting you in London."

'Brain Trust' of British Women Keeps Check On Performance of Biggest Artillery Shells

By Joan Honeybourne

(Junior Commander, Auxiliary Territorial Service

Copyright by International News Service

London, July 20—"Stand by!" . . . "Look in!" I order my O. P's. (by which term the girls at the observation posts are known.) The order has just been phoned through from the battery that a "Big Shoot" with heavy guns—is on.

We are manning one of several observation posts at an experimental establishment on Britain's coast, where guns of all calibers are tested.

We are called the "brain trust" of the Auxiliary Territorial Service.

Every officer among us has a science degree. Every girl in the ranks is educated up to matriculation standard, and needs to be in order to handle the complicated instruments and work out the difficult calculations that our work entails.

At my order, "Look in!" the two girls with me in the observation post watch through a window for the splash as the shells hit the sea, and dot their position on the glass with special ink.

We use these vertical windows for determination of ranges and the deviation of shells. For high shell bursts horizontal mirrors placed on tables outside the posts and manned by two other girls are used. The high bursts are reflected in the mirrors and an impression of their position taken on special paper.

Tense, breathless moments as we look in through the windows! We see the splashes as the shells hit the water. We "dot" them down on the window with the special ink.

No, our ear drums don't burst. You see, in our advanced posts we are miles in front of the guns.

But our comrades 'way back in their offices, which are near the guns, aren't so lucky. They've cotton wool in their ears. The noise is deafening, the office walls are shaking, windows are open lest the glass fly.

For the shells we are "spotting" come from 15-inch guns, and when they are fired the very earth seems to open under the feet of anyone near them.

That round of "heavies" is over. "Shot!" I order my girls.

Soon I give the "look in!" command again. Star shells this time.

A star shell drops slowly. We take the position when it lights up, and by means of a stopwatch and a buzzer we record the rate at which it falls.

Doing a real man's work, the O. P.'s use such complicated instruments as a theodolite to find the range, and a director which is usually used for range but is also employed for low bursts, showing the exact position where the shell hits or "grazes" as we call it.

With equal ease the O. P.s handle fuse-scales to test the accuracy of the setting of fuse-caps from the position at which the shells burst.

Velocity Noted Down

The big guns fire only a few rounds in a series, but smaller guns may fire up to as many as a hundred rounds.

While the O. P. girls are at their several posts, other officers and assistants are busy in the velocity room. Working at a board of intricate instruments and dials, they are finding the velocity of the shells which the O. P. girls are spoting.

Other officers, Company Commanders Chalklin and Jolin, deal with ballistics and research in a traveling laboratory.

All the officers did scientific work before the war. One was a physicist at a London hospital, another is the wife of a physics lecturer, a third was a physics instructor.

It is now 12:30 and lunch time. We have brought sandwiches with us and water bottles as we get very thirsty.

Our day began at dawn this morning, for there is a "big shoot" on, and we shall work on while there is enough light to see by.

First we met for "parade" at the O. P. office.

Lorries took us and our instruments to the O. P.'s, which are scattered about some miles from the guns.

Most of the girls are fully qualified to drive these lorries, just as they can work on the telephone exchange; and they also help to run the wireless room.

Wear Special Uniforms

The O. P.'s are wearing their special uniforms, consisting of Navy blue skirts, white, open-necked shirts and blue pullovers. Over this they wear a pea-jacket, a three-quarter length loose coat under which can be worn all manner of woolies in the very severe weather which we often get on the coast where we are stationed. For further protection the girls are also issued with rubber boots, woollen socks and southwesters and mackintoshes.

We are the only members of the A. T. S. allowed the privilege of wearing the service caps of the regiment to which we are attached.

We officers wear white skirts and blue jackets, white shirts and black ties.

When we are back in our offices tomorrow, the nearby guns will be cracking and booming again, but we shall be too busy working out our readings with conversion tables, slide-rules and T-squares to pay much attention.

Massachusetts Discovers New Sex Murder

By the United Press

(Picture on Page 1)

Boston, July 20.—Two gruesome sex murders were revealed tonight as Reading police held a 16-year-old boy for the murder of a high school girl and, about 15 miles away, Swampscott police found the nude body of an attractive bookkeeper lying in the woods.

The body of Constance Shipp, 15, was found last night in the parsonage of the Reading Baptist Church and the body of Miss Frances M. Cochran, 19, was discovered this afternoon after a telephone "tip."

Both girls apparently had been ravished and their bodies were badly mutilated. Miss Shipp had been bludgeoned and then stabbed and hacked with a knife.

A branch three quarters of an inch in diameter had been rammed down Miss Cochran's throat. She had been beaten so brutally that her face was almost unrecognizable and her clothing, some of which was piled beside her body, was ripped and torn when she was dragged into the woods.

Her skull was crushed and her body was bruised from head to foot.

Disappeared Last Week

The victims disappeared last week, Miss Shipp on Tuesday and Miss Cochran on Thursday. No trace of either had been found until their battered bodies were discovered by police

Despite the similarity of the crimes, authorities were not inclined to believe the killings were the work of one person.

The youth held without warrant in the slaying of Miss Shipp had been caretaker of the parsonage while Rev. Raymond Cooper was vacationing. The parsonage is about 200 yards from the girl's home and there was no explanation as to how she might have been lured into the house where she was attacked and stabbed to death.

There were no signs of a struggle outside the house, but inside furniture was upset and broken indicating Miss Shipp had tried to fight off her assailant. The groceries she had purchased before she vanished lay undisturbed on a table.

Miss Cochran, a bookkeeper for a Lynn Leather Co., was on her way home from work when she disappeared. Acquaintanaces who rode with her on the bus said she got off a stop earlier than usual to mail a letter. That was the last time she was seen alive.

Her body was found today after a telephone call from a man who said: "You'll find a body on the Danvers Road." The caller then hung up.

Boy Questioned Ten Hours

A searching party found the body in woods just off the road. The body was removed to a hospital for an autopsy.

In Reading, District Attorney Robert A. Bradford of Middlesex County announced the boy held in connection with the Shipp girl's death would be formally charged with murder tomorrow. He had been questioned for ten hours in the presence of his parents.

Youth Held For Her Murder

CONSTANCE SHIPP, 15, a Reading, Mass., high school student, whose mutilated body was found in a Baptist parsonage. A 16-year-old boy was held in the case. She had disappeared Tuesday

Price Ceilings For Cotton Yarn, Cloth Are Raised

The office of Price Administration yesterday made increases ranging from 1 to 4 cents a pound in the price "ceilings" of various categories of cotton yarn and cloth.

Many protests had been received by Congress from farm representatives and textile interests that existing ceilings—the maximum price at which the products may be sold—were too low.

The increases, effective immediately, included:

Single-ply cotton yarn 20s from 38 to 41 cents a pound. All other grades of single-ply yarns were also increased 3 cents a pound.

Two-ply 20s from 44 to 45 cents a pound, with other two-ply yarns also increased 1 cent.

Standard print cloth and carded broadcloth from 39 to 43 cents a pound.

Posse of 80 Seeks Comdr. Latimore Lost in Hawaii

A posse of 80 United States sailors and soldiers yesterday searched the hills and canefields near Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, for Commander Thomas C. Latimore, 51, of the submarine tender Dobbin, who disappeared while on a hike last Friday, the Associated Press reported.

The naval officer is a native of Chattanooga, Tenn., and was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1910. Since then he has seen extensive service on destroyers and submarines. He was one-time attorney general at Tutuila, Samoa. Commander Latimore married the former Miss Katherine Beach, of Rockville, Md., and has two children, Elizabeth and Katherine Latimore.

Anti-New Deal Utility Group Quietly Disbands

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The drastic change in the national power problem, with shortages threatened under the pressure of the rapidly expanding defense program, was emphasized here yesterday when it was learned that the committee of utility executives, organized in 1935 to combat New Deal public power policies, has quietly disbanded.

The group had been dominated in recent years by Wendell L. Willkie. No explanation of its disbandment has been made public, but persons close to it indicated last night that the utilities executive had decided that the current situation left the organization little to do. With the demands for power for defense threatening to curtail supplies for domestic users and the need for increased production, both public and private, being demonstrated in frequent developments, it was suggested, they found that there was no longer reason to keep alive an organization to combat Administration policies or legislative proposals.

Living Costs Up By 3.4 Per Cent Since Mid-March

Living costs in large cities rose 3.4 per cent between mid-March and mid-June, more than during the entire period from August, 1939, to March this year, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said yesterday.

This advance, half of which came between May 15 and June 15, brought the bureau's cost of living index to 6 per cent above the figure of August, 1939, when the war began.

Costs of food and house furnishings made the sharpest gains, the bureau said. The largest increase for any single city in the three-month period was reported for Buffalo, N. Y., where all items rose by 4.4 per cent.

CIO Auto Union Asks Parley On Output Cut

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 20.—R. J. Thomas, international president of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.), today asked President Roosevelt to call a management-labor conference to discuss the suggested 50 per cent curtailment of production in the automobile industry.

The tentative program calling for a cut in half of automobile production in the next 12 months was announced yesterday by Leon Henderson, administrator of prices and civilian supply.

Declaring the reduction would mean serious dislocation of the economic life of automobile-manufacturing communities, Thomas told the President in a message:

"We are wholly for national defense, but seriously doubt that a sharp cut is necessary or advisable at this time, before machinery and man-power made idle can be utilized for defense production.

Proposals Not Specified

"In behalf of more than a half million members of the U. A. W., I earnestly request that you call immediately a joint conference of management and labor in the automobile industry and Government to consider practical proposals which our union has to offer."

Thomas did not say what the union's proposals were, but the U. A. W. executive board recently suggested a gradual change from automobile to defense production, thereby forestalling a sudden curtailment of employment in the industry.

Richard T. Frankensteen, international vice president of the U. A. W., added that he is opposed to any cuts that "come so quickly that they do not give a chance for automobile workers to get jobs on defense projects."

Governor Coming to D. C.

"If the cut is made gradually enough," he said, "these workers can be absorbed in the defense projects."

Union officials have discussed this proposal with Chrysler, Ford and General Motors officials, Frankensteen said, and have found them willing to cooperate.

At the same time, Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner announced he would fly to Washington Tuesday to participate in a conference of automobile and parts manufacturers to discuss the automobile production cut.

"We are fearful that such a drastic cut now, before defense production requires the machinery and manpower, would mean dislocation of employment and huge welfare loads, rather than the orderly absorption of the automobile industry's huge productive capacity into defense work," Van Wagoner said.

"The automobile industry is patriotic and plans to do its full share, but it is our opinion the shift should be gradual, and that sharp dislocations of employment should be avoided at all costs," he added.

C. I. O. Union Asks Roosevelt To Take Over Bendix Plant

By the United Press

Passaic, N. J., July 20.—Loren J. Houser, regional director of the aircraft division of the United Automobile Workers of America (C. I. O.), today urged President Roosevelt to take over the plant of Air Associates, Inc., in Bendix, where a strike has been in progress ten days.

In a letter to the President, Houser recommended that Mr. Roosevelt enforce provisions of the Russell-Overton amendment to the Selective Service Act with an executive order under which the Government would take over the plant "until such time as the company decides to cooperate with national defense and to comply with the law of the United States of America."

Houser charged the company with violation of the National Labor Relations Act by employment of gangsters to deprive the workers of their right to strike."

"The Air Associates, Inc., employs about 700 workers," he wrote. "They manufacture airplane parts for the Army and Navy under defense contracts. The company is paying the lowest wages in the aircraft industry. We feel sure that the low wages paid by the company are not due to the failure of the Government to pay a fair price to the company for its defense contracts."

The letter followed a conference at New Jersey headquarters of the union by C. I. O. leaders and telephone communications with Richard T. Frankensteen, national aviation director of the C. I. O.

Last Friday the union accused the company of having dropped nine union men after the C. I. O. had been victorious in a recent NLRB election to determine the workers' bargaining agent. Company officials said the dismissals were layoffs made necessary by an aluminum shortage.

Last Thursday strikers charged that 35 strikebreakers hired by the company had entered the plant carrying rifles and other weapons. Police used tear gas to dispel a mass picket line. Subsequently, the union agreed to limit the number of pickets at the plant if strikebreakers were removed. One employe was found with a rifle and ammunition in his automobile.

Soap Strike Threatened

Jersey City, N. J., July 20 (INS).—A strike, the first in the 135-year existence of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., threatens to call out 2,000 employes Monday morning at 8 o'clock.

The Employe's Association, an independent union, unanimously voted to strike unless their demands, which include a basic wage increase of 10 per cent with double time for Sundays and holidays and time-and-a-half for Saturdays, are granted by the company.

The plant has contracts to furnish soap and glycerin for the Army and Navy.

Boy Retrieving Ball Hit by Brick; Householder Held

A 14-year-old Negro youth was struck in the head yesterday by a brick when he ran into a neighbor's yard to retrieve a baseball.

The boy, James W. Blackwell, 1358 B Street Northeast, is at Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture. Police are holding Howard Cash, Negro, 46, 1328-B Street Northeast, on charges of assault.

Oscar Young, the injured boy's step-father, said that Cash had thrown the brick when the boy entered his gate to get the ball.

Ickes Checking Oil Companies On Sale Trends

Possibility of gasoline rationing in the East was raised again last night as Secretary of Interior Ickes moved to check with oil companies on the response to his appeal for a voluntary one-third reduction in consumption by motorists.

Ickes sent telegraphic requests to 19 large oil companies for weekly reports on their retail sales in this area. Only the day before, the Secretary had said that a consumption cut of a third "is imperative" if drastic rationing is to be avoided.

Messages to the oil companies, signed by Ralph K. Davies, deputy coordinator of petroleum, said:

"What we want to develop is the nearest possible measure of the trend of retail purchasing in this area and what effect requests for voluntary curtailment have on the use of gasoline."

Appeal to Motorists

If the reports fail to reflect a sufficient curtailment, it was regarded by officials as certain that Ickes would order immediate compulsory rationing of gasoline in these densely populous States in which more than 11,000,000 of the Nation's estimated 33,000,000 motor vehicles are in operation.

An appeal for motorists to cooperate with defense officials came yesterday from Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association.

In a statement, Henry said car owners could anticipate "higher operating costs and new conditions having a bearing on every phase of motoring."

May Divert More Tankers

"It is fortunate," he continued, "that the whole defense policy is one of seeking universal cooperation in lieu of sudden and drastic restrictions. Thus motorists should not take lightly appeals for their support and cooperation in all programs designed to ease the weight of defense conditions."

Authoritative quarters said, meanwhile, that the British were hoping to get still more tankers from this country and that conferences on the question have been held with maritime commission experts and Ickes. Some 50 tankers, representing one-third of the United States' tonnage, already have been diverted from the domestic trade to British service.

To Discuss Tankers Today

New York, July 20 (U.P.).—Oil company officials said tonight that at a meeting in the office of Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes in Washington at 3 p. m. tomorrow they expect to be asked for between 50 and 100 additional oil tankers to be turned over to the British war effort. Representatives of approximately 30 companies are expected to attend.

Details for the transfer of as many as 25 of the vessels may be worked out at the meeting, it was said.

Miss Elliott Sees No Danger Of Appliance Price Runaway

Miss Harriet Elliott, associate administrator of the office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, said in an address broadcast over the Columbia system yesterday that automobile prices might go up next year in view of the smaller output and the increase in the cost of production, but thatother durable goods, such as refrigeratros and washing machines, have been stocked heavily by both consumers and dealers in recent months and present stocks will probably be disposed of at prevailing prices.

Her statement followed a tentative order Saturday by Leon Henderson, price administrator, cutting production of automobiles, refrigerators, washing machines and ironing equipment by about 50 per cent.

Miss Elliott pointed out that despite the defense program consumer goods would be turned out in greater volume next year than during the depression years.

"Nor will these goods necessarily be more expensive," Miss Elliott said. "It is true that automobiles may go up in price. But we are already talking with the automobile companies on the matter of price and we are finding them willing to hold their advances to the essential minimum."

If there is real need for a car, a refrigerator or a washing machine the consumer should get it, but if not, the money should be put into defense bonds, Miss Elliott suggested.

"There may be days ahead when the cash will make you a good deal happier and a good deal more secure than a worn-out washing machine," she added.

Fortunately the durable goods industries, which are those hardest hit by lack of raw materials for consumer goods, will be drawn into the defense program sooner than the light industries, Miss Elliott said.

Despite lack of materials for continued production of consumer goods on the present scale, Miss Elliott said that her office had taken steps weeks ago to provide a program which would insure the replacement parts for existing durable goods such as automobiles would have priority over other civilian uses in the allotment of raw materials to factories.

Red Officer's Wife Fights Too, Nazis Say

Berlin, July 20 (AP).—D. N. B., official German news agency, circulated today a dispatch from the eastern front saying the wives of Russian officers frequently go into battle at their husbands' sides.

The wife of an officer identified as "Capt. Wasiliewitsch Nowikow, instructor at the Leningrad Military Academy," was among recently captured officers' wives who were found armed and wearing Soviet uniforms, D. N. B. said.

Power Planning

The Federal Power Commission's plan for meeting the power needs of the defense program is of impressive size. Despite the obstacles to expansion resulting from prolonged depression and Government regulatory activity, it is altogether unlikely that the utilities would have been prepared, under happier auspices, to meet the extraordinary demands for power to which the emergency has given rise. By that same token it seems probable that the passing of the emergency will leave the industry with a troublesome problem of excess capacity. However, the defense program is already hampered to some extent by the inadequacy of existing power supplies, and deficiencies must be covered as soon as possible, regardless of what the future holds in store.

The FPC's five-year plan would, it is estimated, cost about $2,350,000,000 in toto, with an annual expenditure of about $470,000,000. Capital to finance hydroelectric developments will, it is stated, be supplied by the Government, through the RFC, while it is hoped that private industry will furnish the capital for steam plants. But however much private capital may contribute, it appears certain that the part played by the Government in the development of power is going to become increasingly important. For instance, it is significant that the FPC has asked for authority to supervise the power plan and arrange for the disposition of any new facilities built by the Government and later incorporated in private systems. Long-range planning unquestionably necessitates supervision by some public authority, but that does not preclude cooperation between public and private interests in executing plans. Governmental supervision is also essential at this time to assure a flow of required materials to manufacturers of generating equipment, whether generators are being manufactured for private concerns or on Government order.

If the emergency results in systematic planned development of the Nation's power resources, it will have yielded permanent benefits for the enjoyment of future generations. In this field of long-range planning private industry inevitably falls down, because the public interest makes it necessary to limit the scope of private developments, and such limitation in turn precludes fully integrated development and use of power resources. But once we have a plan to work upon, there is plenty of opportunity for the exercise of private initiative, backed by private capital, to share in the work of generating and distributing power to all parts of the United States.

German Airmen

Nazi plane crews recently captured by the British are reported to be extremely youthful and inexperienced. It is still too early to judge what this means, but it could mean one of two things: either the majority of Germany's skilled crews are still operating on the Eastern Front or the Nazis are a good deal harder pressed for air personnel than has been generally supposed. Perhaps the German high command, notwithstanding its protestations to the contrary, figures on keeping the bulk of its trained airmen occupied over Russia in a supreme effort to blast the Soviets into submission before resuming heavy raids on Britain. If so, it must be prepared for increasing losses in the west during the interim. Last week the British downed well over 100 Nazi bombers and fighters and are apparently all set to improve this performance, in spite of the fact that the enemy is now sending more planes against them.

British fliers have stated repeatedly that the Nazis refuse to fight unless they clearly outnumber the British. Whether this is due to faintheartedness or to Nazi acknowledgment that in a fair fight British planes and British superior training put Nazi airmen at a serious disadvantage is unclear. There is no doubt, however, of the inroads which the British and their allies have made upon the supply of Nazi airmen. Since the war began it is estimated that Germany has lost nearly 20,000 trained fliers. This is more serious than its loss of some 7,500 planes. For mass production cannot be applied to fliers as to machines. It takes at least six months to train new men to fly and a good deal longer to reach maximum crew efficiency.

From the beginning of the war, it is true, the training of Nazi crews has not been nearly as thorough as that of the British. But if the British continue to take the initiative in the air, batting down still more Nazi planes, Nazi crews may get still less training before being pushed into combat. In any case, the British ought to find out before long whether Nazi claims of a gigantic reserve of fliers are true or just another aspect of the now familiar "terror" technique.

More Production Cuts

A 50 per cent "tentative" reduction in output of automobiles and correspondingly drastic production cuts for refrigerators and other household equipment have been ordered by Leon Henderson as head of the OPACS. His announcement does not come as a surprise, since it has been known for some time that action of this sort was contemplated. It is, however, disturbing to hear that the OPM (which ordered the initial 20 per cent cut in automobile output and now has a joint industry-labor committee considering plans for further cuts) was not consulted by the OPACS before this latest order was issued. Such conspicuous lack of cooperation between the OPACS and the OPM tends to confirm rumors of internal jealousies and jurisdictional rivalries that necessarily impair the usefulness of both agencies. In the absence of a unified defense organization, bewildered industries are bound to be hampered in adjusting their operations to defense needs.

So far as consumers are concerned, the prospective cuts in production of automobiles and durable household equipment, need work no great hardship. And such inconveniences as do result should be borne uncomplainingly in view of the fact that large amounts of strategic raw materials will be released for defense use and for indispensable civilian needs. The public is prone to overemphasize this consumer angle of the adjustment problems involved in executing our defense program, and to underrate or ignore the effect upon manufacturing industries and dependent distributive trades. Mr. Henderson is fully aware of the difficulties confronting industries that are compelled to shift from production of one type of goods to another type or else shut down partly or entirely. But he also knows that business as usual is not compatible with arming for defense. There just is not enough steel, copper, zinc, lead, etc., to go around. By some means or other the defense industries and the indispensable civilian industries which are also essential to defense must be assured of adequate supplies of scarce materials to prevent disastrous shutdowns. By orderly and systematic reduction of the output of certain less essential industries, the pressure to secure needed materials is relieved, and as Mr. Henderson explains, the necessity of an elaborate system of preferences is obviated.

The great advantage of announcing the objectives of the curtailment program now, is that it will afford the industries affected an opportunity to work out, in consultation with Government officials, detailed plans for future guidance. Production schedules, instead of being abruptly cut, can be tapered off gradually so that thousands of men will not suddenly lose their jobs. Training programs can be made use of to qualify men for new types of defense work. There is no gainsaying the fact that serious difficulties will arise; some manufacturers, for instance, will find it easier to shift to defense work than others, while car dealers and their employes will be badly hit by the reduced volume of business coming their way. But all these painful adjustments are part of the price that has to be paid to secure the country against attack. All that the OPACS can do is to try to assist the transition to the new defense economy in ways that will do the least harm to civilian activities compatible with maximum defense efforts.

A Nazi Coup Foiled

For the third time in little more than a year the sinister role which Nazi agents are playing in Latin America has been dramatically revealed. In June, 1940, a special investigating committee of the Uruguayan Congress uncovered a well-organized military plot to seize Uruguay. This exposure, plus the timely arrival at Montevideo of the U. S. cruiser Quincy, probably prevented Hitler from acquiring a strategic foothold in South America. More recently, Nazi agents succeeded in fanning the flames of a century-old border dispute between Ecuador and Peru to the point where an armed clash resulted. Now a Nazi plot to take over Bolivia has been frustrated by the Bolivian authorities and the German minister at La Paz given his walking papers.

Bolivia is a small nation which was bled white in the ruinous Chaco war. This state of affairs gave the Nazis an opportunity to fish in troubled waters in the hope, perhaps, that the establishment of a pro-Hitler regime at La Paz would make it possible to cut off Bolivian tin shipments that are vital to the British war effort and American defense. Fortunately the plot was nipped in the bud. But the circumstance that while busily engaged in fighting a far-flung war the Third Reich has been able to finance and direct far-reaching subversive movements in several South American nations should reveal to Americans the size and scope of the danger that would confront them in the event of a Hitler triumph, when Germany's hands would be freed for large-scale efforts in this hemisphere.

Uruguay, Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia are by no means the only Latin-American nations where the Nazis have been busy. They have established powerful centers of intrigue and propaganda in many other places in this hemisphere. They continue to be capable of doing considerable harm to the internal peace and order of neighboring republics. The quicker this danger is recognized and acted upon the safer this hemisphere will be. But side by side with measures of internal defense against Fifth Column elements, the nations of the New World must take whatever action lies within the power of each to strengthen the hands of all those nations that occupy the front line in the struggle against the Nazi world menace.

Tool Of The Axis

Franco's abject submission to Berlin was strikingly revealed last Thursday by his militant and obviously Axis-inspired speech before the National Council of the Falange. The Spanish dictator is apparently being used as the spearhead of a Nazi campaign to provoke discord among the Latin-American republics, for his words were clearly designed for consumption below the Rio Grande. First of all, in line with the customary Nazi propaganda technique, he tried to discredit the United States. Whenever this country has offered economic aid to Spain, he said, it has always tried to force Spain to obey the will of other nations. This is, of course, untrue. Six shiploads of foods and medicines have been sent to Spain at the urgent request of the Spanish government. There was no accompanying condition except that the supplies were to be used to alleviate Spanish suffering and were not to be sent on to other countries under German or Italian control. When Franco delivered his speech he was perfectly familiar with the situation. Yet he has seen fit to distort the facts to suit his own—or Hitler's—purpose. Considering his bitter denunciation of the United States, expressed repeatedly throughout his speech, the only dignified course for this country is to withhold further shipments. If Franco places allegiance to Berlin ahead of the desperate needs of his own country, the choice is his—and so is the responsibility.

Franco claimed that the Allies have already lost the war and that American action now might change the conflict into a war between Europe and the Americas. "This could only lead to the ruin of the American nations," he said. His argument may seem potent to some of our sister republics but he erred badly when he stressed that such a war would end the liberty of the seas for the Americas. The plain truth is that it would not, given the unity of action which is the basis of hemisphere defense. The Nazis appreciate this; hence their efforts through Franco to divide the enthusiasms and loyalties of Latin America. Regardless of how effective a propagandist the Spanish general may prove to be, the Nazis will continue their divide and rule tactics. That Franco is but an expedient tool will surely be clear to our shrewd fellow Americans to the south.

Canada Shows The Way

In announcing a plan for control over wages, Canada has ventured upon ground on which our politicians fear to tread. The Dominion government publicly announces that in its desire to "avoid the vicious spiral of inflation" it is curbing price increases, controlling rents, restricting and heavily taxing profits. The government adds, however, that "this is not enough. The effect of these controls would be offset if no control were placed on basic wages." So the Dominion now has a law freezing all wages in defense industries at present levels for the duration of the war. However, workers are to receive so-called "bonuses" to compensate for changes in living costs since the outbreak of the war; the amount of these bonuses to be raised or lowered when the cost of living changes as much as 5 per cent. With living costs now almost 8 per cent above the prewar base level, workers will immediately be entitled to some increase in wages. Isn't it about time for the United States to take notice of the Canadian experiment? It is a reminder that a price control program with wages left out resembles the proverbial play from which the chief actor is missing.

BOY INTO POET

He sees beyond the lightless hills,
Beyond the dark and muted town,
The moon like lost Eurydice
Through cloudy caverns going down.

He learns of night a stranger grief
Than any grief that he has known.
The sky itself is alien.
He stands immutably alone.

No word is fashioned that will hold
The measure of his new unrest.
The cloud-drift deepens, and the moon
Is lost beyond the stormy west.

Letters To The Editor

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

And Then What?

The hour is getting late as I write this letter. Except for the ticking of an alarm clock in my room all is quiet. Peace reigns but the chatter of time about me begins to take on greater meaning as newspaper headlines face me from beneath a lamp on the desk. They shriek death, suffering, insecurity, war. I sit coldly staring at these words.

Tonight my big thought is, how am I going to make more money in order to marry a lovely girl and have some happiness. The money I now earn comes from defense work for the Federal Government. The money a good many of us are earning these days comes from work done with the purpose of defending the existence of that Government. We have come to understand that everything we do these days is for the defense of our country.

Twenty-five years ago another young man might have been staying in this very same rooming house in Washington, thinking, for the moment, of the same things and doing the same work as myself. He, too, might have been one of the thousands of those brought down to the Nation's Capital to do temporary or indefinite defense work. Those same headlines might have stared at him from this desk one night and that ticking clock over there tolled minutes of life for him.

And I can hear him say to himself, "Who will be here 25 years from now under these circumstances?" And I ask, will my son be in this room 25 years from now, thinking of a lovely girl and earning gold rush money out of national destruction work? And then what?

As wise as you are, tell me how I can seal this room from that young fellow 25 years from now?

BILL BATTEN.

Health Defense

I have nothing but sympathy for those who are suffering abroad. But I must admit that I have a great deal more sympathy for the thousands of children in our own country—especially the South—who suffer from lack of proper nourishment. I wonder why Americans do not raise ten billion dollars to correct the pitiful conditions which exist in the United States. And this could be done in the interests of national defense! Healthy bodies make good soldiers. Certainly one would have to go Chungking to find condition comparable to those which exist in most of our Southern States.

Don't tell me that our Government has provided adequately for the unfortunates of this country. Nothing left me so sick as a picture I saw in a reputable publication about a year ago. Inclosed by a fence was a pit in which were dumped literally thousands of oranges. Nourishment galore—but these were not to be marketed. This is the sort of thing which breeds false "isms" in our country. Here is our real "Fifth Column." By providing for the welfare of our own people as the original New Deal program so splendidly set out to do, we could make this country and its government safe from attack both from within and without.

Mail For Iceland

After the President has announced, and it has been published, that the Marines are in Iceland, why cannot the families of these boys receive mail from them and the boys receive mail from their families? It is enough hardship on a family to know the husband or son is one of the contingent sent to Iceland without adding to it the disappointment of not being able to have letters forwarded. Everything is being done for the "draftee," and the wives and sweethearts of those in camp here in the continental United States are exhibiting much concern over the entertainment and amusement offered the boys in camp, while those wives, mothers and sweethearts of boys sent out of the United States are suffering silently, with something much more vital to worry about and not being given one bit of recognition. I just wish some of them were in my shoes for even a day.

The USO

I recently received a letter from a draftee stationed at Camp Wallace, Tex., which I believe to be worth passing along to you. I am quoting that portion of the letter which relates to a soldier's regard for the USO.

"Give freely to the USO, Chris, and tell your friends and have them tell their friends. No soldier can sincerely complain about a hard week's work when a day and a half's entertainment in town awaits him at the end of it. To the boys in khaki, these large cities in proximity to the camps are the nowhere that a fellow sometimes gets 40 miles from. But with the United Service Organization, every soldier becomes a partner in the ownership of the place. They feed us, give us dances, take us joy riding, furnish transportation, and, best of all, we get smiles and that pleasant voice inflection so conspicuously lacking in top sergeants. The USO is the heartbeat of the 1941 American line of defense.

"Sounds like I'm giving a speech, I am. I was really impressed, Chris, the way those town people, through the bureau, went out of the way to entertain us. They did everything but tuck us into bed at night. If it continues to grow there won't be a man in the country who'll regret being drafted."

Iceland

Some misunderstand our occupation of a naval base in Iceland. Iceland is historically and geographically a part of the Western Hemisphere. Hence its occupation comes within the Congressional plan to protect this hemisphere and is not a dictatorial act by the President. First, Iceland was declared by Secretary Seward in 1868 a part of the Western Hemisphere. Secondly, Iceland is south—not east—of Greenland—a land admitted by all a part of the Western Hemisphere. A longitudinal line from the most eastern part of Greenland passes 55 miles east of the most eastern part of Iceland. Iceland, then, is in this hemisphere. Hence Germany has no right to object to our presence or to include it in a combat zone.

Miles Per Gallon

It once seemed fun to pass all the cars on the road, and get away with it. Speed was the object of this national game, in which the dogs along the way joined in to the limits of their capacities. "I averaged 60 clear through the national park." "Not bad, but I did 65 on the lake drive." The canine counterpart, no doubt, was "I certainly made that fellow leave the side of the road!" Neither you nor the dogs were aware of the scenery and you knew you were getting dirty looks behind—for miles behind—your back.

But the old game is stale and I've taken up a new one—the game of miles per gallon. I've been trying it out along the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains, down into the Carolinas. It's more fun than speeding, because it requires more skill, and I here offer my record as a target for other readers to shoot at. In a popular priced car I covered 1,118.9 miles on 42.1 gallons of gas, an average of 26.58 miles per gallon. We took in all the swell look-outs and swank places—Blowing Rock, Asheville, Little Switzerland—and we must have totaled several million degrees of curvature up and down mountain roads. My base speed was 40, but on the straightaways I coasted. By studying my driving habits I discovered that there were many ways of building up mileage while saving gas and driving joyfully on a four-day scenic jaunt.

Who can beat my record? I'm shooting at 30 on my next trip.

Attention, Congress!

It is indeed a sad commentary on the state of this Nation that it cannot present to the entire world, friend and foe alike, even the semblance of a unified front within its own governing bodies.

Here we have the spectacle of local politicians in Congress refusing to heed the advice and warning of the best military minds in the country, that two measures would incalculably safeguard the Nation's safety—a longer period of service for the Regular Army and the draftees and the right to send them to other parts of the world to cope with any emergency that might arise.

What must the world think of us that we are so bold with words, so beautiful with intentions and yet so chary of any action more decisive than verbal gas attacks?

The idea of some of our Congressmen trying to make military laws in accordance with campaign promises and moral values is as insane as an engineer using blue ink in gasoline tanks to blend with the car's outer enamel and varnish.

When in the name of heaven are these Congressmen going to treat their country like a manly soldier instead of a namby-pamby weakling?

Let's have a longer Army service and the nonhemisphere right or else let's hang up a sign for all to see:

"Don't mind us; we're just making funny noises."

Army Sport

In the Army you get a lot of chances to needle a second lieutenant. Sometimes, there's a captain for sport, and at very rare intervals it is safe to stick one in a first sergeant.

But a general, boy! You hardly ever see one.

And now we have one cornered and cussing. And most of us are not in the Army. What are we waiting for.

The Post Impressionist

On Record

Listening yesterday to Tschaikowsky's brilliant B-flat minor concerto, over our automatic record-changing phonograph, reminded me again of the first phonograph I ever saw or heard. It went under the name of "graphophone," and it was, indeed, quite a machine! It was wonderful. I remember it lay around the house long after its last cylinder record was broken, but finally disappeared. Now it has long since been buried in some ignominious junk heap, but it belongs in the annals of our family, just as its pretotype belongs in the history of America.

I don't recall exactly when we got the thing, but it was before we moved to town, and that was in 1900. The invention of the phonograph was then several years of age (Mr. Edison's patent was dated July 31, 1877), but it was not yet a commercial venture. To be sure, this plaything of ours was not a thing of beauty, either in its physical lines or in the sounds it emitted. But we thought it was marvelous, and I guess it really was. It was, truly, a source of much-needed entertainment, and in some slight degree I think it enlarged our musical horizon, for that was, you must remember, long before the days of the radio, when often the only music in the average farm home was the human voice and perhaps an old wheezy organ.

Like all those first "talking machines," ours was no elaborate affair. It contained only the bare essentials of phonography—a small motor propelled by a spring, a cylinder for the record, the pick-up, and the horn. At the big end, the horn was no more than 6 or 8 inches across.

I remember too how we came by the machine. We didn't just go out and buy it. That would have been spending money for foolishness. It was won as a premium for "trading" at one of the drygoods stores at Cherry Creek, N. Y., and to us kids it was miraculous that anything so ultramodern and so fruitful of pleasure could be obtained without paying out actual cash, which, as the saying went, "did not grow on every bush."

The records we played were frightfully limited in number. We never, I think, bought any more than those that originally came with the machine. They were both talking and singing, religious and secular. We liked the funny ones best and played them over and over, never tiring of the old gags. We liked them all the better because we knew them by heart. The hymns were the same as the ones we sang in church, but it was strangely different hearing them sung anonymously out of the inexplicable depths of a tin horn. Somehow they were divested of their sanctimoniousness and took on a fresh meaning.

"Bringing in the Sheaves" was one of them. It was a Sunday school song whose figures of speech struck home. We knew what sheaves were, all right, and bringing them in was no picnic. I am not sure that we assimilated all the song's ulterior message, but it sounded fine on the graphophone:

> Bringing in the sheaves,
> Bringing in the sheaves,
> We shall come rejoicing
> Bringing in the sheaves.

Then there was a song entitled "If You Can't Say Something Good, Don't Say Nothing At All," which, after all, was pretty good homily, complete with its double negative. Another one was a popular "ballad" of the day called "Out In An Automobile." I can still hum the tunes to these, but the words have gone a'glimmering.

The only other one of those records I remember was a sort of vaudeville skit called "The Deacon's Sermon." It began:

> Well, Si, what part of the deacon's sermon did you like best?
> That part where he said "Aaaamen" sounded the best to me."

This was followed by a scrambled version of the deacon's sermon, something about feeding a multitude of 10,000 people with 5,000 loaves and 5,000 fishes, a variation of the Messianic miracle that set us into gales of laughter. The sermons we were used to were anything but funny. Here, on a little wax cylinder, was comic relief, indeed.

This was the one and only phonograph that we as a family ever possessed. Later, when the improved machines appeared on the market, we often thought it would be nice to have a modern phonograph, but we never made the step. When times grew better we acquired a beautiful, brand new upright piano, and that was about all the music one house could stand. When we wanted to hear a real phonograph, we went over to our Uncle Chauncey's. He had a new "Edison" with a horn two feet across and innumerable records, all the Uncle Josh cylinders and the old hymns, as well as the latest popular hits. It was terrific.

I doubt whether then we knew what a symphony or a concerto was, to say nothing of opera, but I am sure that hearing any of this highbrow music would have bored us stiff. It was entertainment that we needed, and the little old graphophone gave it to us after a fashion. It belongs to a day that is past, along with the stereoscope and the leatherbound "Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" on the parlor table.

New Defense Needs

By Ernest K. Lindley

Earlier Estimates Exceeded

THE ADMINISTRATION is just getting, for the first time, trustworthy estimates of the quantities of raw materials which the defense program will consume during the next 18 months. The final figures are not ready, but the calculations have gone far enough to show that the needs, especially for certain metals, will exceed all earlier estimates.

LINDLEY

Copper, bronze and brass promise to be almost as scarce as aluminum for civilian use. Lack of zinc is already beginning to affect civilian production, although some relief may come in the fall when new smelters begin to operate. Defense will devour nearly all chromite, manganese and other hardening ores that come chiefly from abroad, and the question is whether enough of some of these ores can be piled up to meet defense needs.

In general there will be enough steel for defense, plus moderate civilian consumption. But it is estimated that by next spring new defense production will be eating up more steel of certain types than can be produced currently. This means that stock piles will have to be built up during the next six months. Relatively even greater stock piles will be needed for several other metals.

ZINC IS NOT a metal of which the ordinary householder is highly conscious. But he may soon feel the effects of the shortage. One of the largest concerns making zinc castings has begun to lay off men for lack of zinc. It may have to lay off temporarily most of its 15,000 employes. This concern has about 14,000 customers on its lists, ranging from automobile concerns through radio manufacturers to makers of small gadgets. For lack of zinc castings many of these concerns may have to suspend or slow up production until substitutes can be devised, or the shortage relieved.

Copper output can be increased by raising the price or subsidizing high-cost operations. Several of the large mining companies are working only a single 40-hour shift, due largely to the price which they have cooperated in holding to around 12 cents for almost a year. But defense itself can absorb a large increase in production.

Concerning steel, the main problem will be allocating the reduced quantity available for civilian use. If nature were allowed to take its course, the automobile companies, as large and forward-looking buyers, would get what they needed, but at the expense of hundreds of miscellaneous users. Even now some stove manufacturers face shutdowns because they were slower than the automobile companies in placing orders.

LEON HENDERSON has notified automobile manufacturers that they must reduce production by 50 per cent by January 1. This will permit steel for civilian use to be spread over many other industries, thus keeping our economic system in some kind of balance—although other large consumers, such as refrigerator makers, also will be restricted.

But there is a second reason for hitting the auto makers fairly hard: Their machines, managers, engineers, and skilled workmen are needed for defense.

While the automobile companies have accepted huge defense orders, they are filling most of them by building new plants, buying new machine tools, and employing new workmen. They have gone ahead, meanwhile, making automobiles in record-breaking numbers. Now the time has come when they must take on more defense orders—but at the expense of automobile production.

That this time would come was foreseen last fall by Leon Henderson and some other defense officials. Conversion of automobile plants into defense production was the essence of the Reuther-C. I. O. plan put forward last winter. But the automobile makers, backed by William S. Knudsen, ridiculed the Reuther plan, which was open to much criticism in detail.

NOW, HOWEVER, Henry Ford is said by defense officials to be getting 40 per cent of the machine tools for his huge bomber-production plant at Ypsilanti from his automobile plant at River Rouge. And he is understood to plan to transfer some 40,000 workers from River Rouge. If so, he will outshine in defense production the companies which still try to add defense to full automobile output.

An immediate cut of 50 per cent in auto output would throw many men out of work. Leon Henderson, OPACS administrator, and some other defense officials, therefore favor giving the companies about five months to slide down to that level, while they convert the other half of their resources to defense production.

Knudsen preferred a different approach: asking the auto makers to take on all they can of the new four billion dollar ordnance program. But Knudsen agrees that the cut in auto production must be greater than the 20 per cent for which he asked only a few weeks ago.

Whatever the approach, a 50 per cent cut in auto production was almost inevitable, according to the statistics of defense needs. And as the totals are added, manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers and consumers seem doomed to learn from personal experience that modern war requires metals and intricate machines in quantities which would have seemed fantastic even in World War I.

Mexico's Party Line

By Betty Kirk

Labor States Its Case

MEXICO CITY.—The mass meeting called early last week by the Confederation of Mexican Labor to organize against "Nazi-Fascismo" turned into a revival meeting for the Soviet Union. Vincente Lombardo Toledano, the Father Divine of the Mexican labor movement, led the services exhorting his fervent followers to "unity" with the world proletariat.

"Peace, Little Father, Peace," was the hymn which opened the services as Senor Lombardo Toledano told his congregation that "peace" had been the sole objective of Comrade Stalin when he signed the pact with Germany in August, 1939. This absolution was cheered with impassioned "vivas" as the masses sat spellbound and devout before the altar of their high priest.

The new party line, called "trajectory" here, was laid down to the magnetized masses as Vincente Lombardo Tolendano spoke. Adoration, profound faith, fanatic idealism, were reflected on the faces of his followers. And if any doubt should ever have arisen as to the labor leader's control of the proletariat, since his retirement as general secretary of the Confederation of Mexican Labor to become president of the Latin American Confederation of Labor, it was dispelled at the revival meeting.

THREE HEROES of the masses predominated among the evening's "vivas." They were Stalin, Cardenas and Lombardo, but the greatest of these was Lombardo. After six years of active leadership he abides in the hearts of the downtrodden as the oracle, the leader, the redeemer. And he uses his power to instruct and to mold them into what is undoubtedly one of the best informed proletarian organizations in the world.

The Arena Mexico, where the meeting was held, was jammed to the rafters with a congregation numbering at least 5,000 men and women. More than 2,000 more stood outside, spellbound with every word of their leader. But what they listened to was not typical rabble rousing but an intellectual address which would do credit to any outstanding college president.

It was an address which outlined the crumbling of capitalism over the past hundred years, leading to the first and second world wars, analyzed problems of economic, social and political conflict, as a dynamic textbook does, and forecast a future dominated and led by the world proletariat. It is safe to say that at least 10 per cent of the listeners were illiterate, at least 80 per cent have not been beyond high-school, yet their attention wavered only twice as the clear, chanting voice described to them the mission they have to fulfill.

THE TWO INCIDENTS which disturbed the meeting were electric with significance. The first was a drunk who interrupted with raucous and ill-timed "vivas." Upon him the high priest turned with all the scorn of an ascetic and denounced. "Throw him out! There is no place for drunks in the Mexican revolution!"

The second occurred in the galleries. The recent friction between the Communist Party and the C. T. M. had borne fruit in the hanging of banners saying "Down with Bassols" and "Death to Encinas." Narciso Bassols is the intellectual head of the party, Encinas its general secretary. A girl Communist, offended by the insults to her heroes, attempted to tear the banners down. Men tried to stop her. Hissing and shouting took place. The girl and Communist allies succeeded in displacing the banners and Lombardo said not a word. Later he called for full cooperation with the Communists.

The revival was in fact confessional in so far as Communism in Mexico goes. For the first time masks were off and party members and their fellow travelers came into the open with unabashed belligerence and enthusiasm, dominating the labor meeting completely.

Out of their fanatic demonstrations emerged a vision of the Soviet Union as the new Promised Land of Little Father Stalin, as one who can do no wrong. The devil was Adolph Hitler and purgatory was filled with the "bourgeoise democracies," whose hierarchy, according to the lingo, are all "financiers" and "imperialists."

THE PARTY LINE, a long one which lasted for three hours, can best be summarized as follows:

First: Those responsible for the war are "the financial oligarchies of all the imperialist countries seeking to divide up the world." Viva!

Second: Fascism is the democratic bourgeoise regimes without the liberties of the free trade era.

Third: During the last war there were only two factions, the Allies and the Central Powers. In this one a third great power enters, the Soviet Union. It initiates a "new order in the history of the world, the Socialist state."

Fourth: It is essential that labor organizations in every country create a national front against fascism. To do this "We must unite with our enemies, comrades, on condition that they fight against fascism." (i. e. The "enemies" of the Confederation of Mexican Labor between the signing of the German-Soviet pact and the German invasion of Russia, were unfailingly United States and British "imperialism.")

Fifth: The Trotskyists' plan "to transform the imperialist war into civil war in every bourgeoise country" as published in the Workers' Banner for July was condemned, "because this is no longer a class war." Apropos of this attack on the Trotskyists Lombardo Toledano denounced it the night before the arrests were announced in the United States. He has fought the Trotskyists persistently here, as every good Stalinist does.

Sixth: Diplomatic relations must be resumed with the Soviet Union and Great Britain.

Seventh: The Mexican labor movement must work in accord with the Communist Party, despite the recent rift, as "Unity, unity, unity" is essential in all popular groups now.

Eighth: In Mexico the labor movement must continue to fight for: Lower living costs; greater credit given to agriculture by the state; government control of exports and imports and of the rate of exchange in order "to keep us from being bled white by North American imperialism;" the downfall of the subversive Sinarquista movement, "promoted by the agents of Franco;" expropriation of Nazi and Fascist owned properties; opposition to the transfer of Royal Dutch Shell Oil properties to the United States companies, "If Yankee imperialism thinks that this will be good business it is mistaken. In place of buying rights they will buy obligations because they have debts to pay yet!" (Vivas.) And last but not least the Latin American workers must "prevent the United States from establishing on this continent an economic autarchy to benefit Yankee finance capital."

NINTH: An "authentic good neighbor policy" must be adopted if Mexican workers are to accept it. It will have nothing to do with words nor trips of Hollywood "stars" to Mexico. (Applause.) Neither are good will tours wanted. The good neighbor policy the Mexicans want will include:

A. Settlement of the oil question with recognition of Mexico's right to expropriate if she pays the real value of the properties.

B. An agreement on international waters in order to get needed irrigation for the northern states.

C. Settlement of the public debt.

D. Settlement of he Chamizal dispute which was awarded to Mexico in 1911 but is not yet paid.

E. Trade agreement so that Mexico's commerce will not suffer from "monopoly by the North American imports."

F. Preventing that "the progress of our industry and agriculture are killed."

G. "We wish to be good friends, but rich friends to our neighbors to the North, not poor, not miserable, not slaves—free, powerful, dignified, arisen Mexicans!" (Applause.)

TENTH: Workable diplomatic and commercial relations with other Latin American nations so that there is a true exchange between them and Mexico does not have to depend on the United States or Great Britain for her imports.

Eleventh: The workers must support the Avila Camacho government (although many object to some of the conservative reforms being made) because, "If it falls it will be succeeded by a Rightist, not a Leftist government."

Twelfth: Now more than ever popular front tactics are imperative. The proletariat throughout the world must unite its sections to fight fascism. Salutes were then given to the workers of all countries, whether fighting for democracy or the victims of their own "tyrants." Unity, unity, unity is essential.

Thirteenth: "Comrades — Now comes the dawn; now comes the New World!"

Draft Alternatives

By Mark Sullivan

The Army We Need

GEN. MARSHALL says that August 1—that means next week—is the deadline for action by Congress to keep draftees in service, beyond the one year for which they were inducted. Gen. Marshall wants the draftees kept. Much of Congress is reluctant.

SULLIVAN

The few days left for decision may be too short a time to talk about alternatives. It may be the only practicable thing is to hold the draftees. If Gen. Marshall says so, that carries the greatest possible weight. If the head of the Army says this is unqualifiedly the best way, that his judgment is not affected by enforced expediency, that he is not merely asking for the best that can be done under the circumstances—if Gen. Marshall says that, then no reasonable person will wish to argue.

But there remains a sound judgment that merely keeping the draftees beyond their year will not fully solve our problem. It will lead to future situations as embarrassing as the present one; and it will leave a bad taste among many draftees and their families, who understood their period of service was to be but a year. Finally, keeping the draftees will not give us the kind of Army America needs.

THE KIND OF ARMY America wants is composed of two things. The first is a permanent regular Army, a standing Army. By "permanent" is meant permanence of the individuals composing the Army. Our permanent Army should be made up of men who remain in the Army, make a lifetime career of it.

It is such men who have always made up our Regular Army, men who enlist voluntarily because they like the career, and for the same reason reenlist when their three-years' terms of service end. The permanent standing Army must be made up of soldiers of this kind. For the essentials of a modern Army are that it should be highly mechanized, highly mobile. In such an Army, the soldiers must have greater mechanical skill than can be commonly acquired in a single enlistment. Also, such an Army needs the sort of teamwork, the quick coordination and maneuvering in units, that can only be acquired by fairly long experience with the same personnel, training shoulder to shoulder in the same units.

THIS PERMANENT, standing Army need not be extremely large. Gen. Marshall before a Senate committee last Thursday, said that 1,600,000 would be enough. That is an outside figure—some judge that a million would be enough. (Bear in mind we are speaking of the figure for the permanent standing Army. Bear in mind also that every discussion of the size of our standing Army includes the assumption that we shall have in addition an extremely strong Navy, and an air force practically without limit.)

This regular standing Army of say 1,600,000 is what we need as a permanent Army. In addition we need, for possible emergencies, a reservoir of additional material. This reservoir should be provided by adopting universal military training—military training, as distinct from induction into the Army. The military training should be given to every youth during the first year following school or college. After a few years we would have an adequate reservoir of young men with one year of military training, available for addition to the Regular Army in emergency.

These two things together compose what America needs for its permanent military system.

THE IMMEDIATE QUESTION is, can we set about building up this system now? Is it too late to make a fresh start? As Congress debates whether to extend the service of the draftees, is it practicable to consider, as a substitute, the permanent two-part military system here suggested? Could we get it started in time?

The first concrete question is, can we build up our Regular Army, quickly enough, to a figure of approximately 1,600,000? To start with, we already have 476,000 regulars. (These are the regular three-year voluntary enlistees, as distinct from one-year draftees.) As an addition to these, we could probably get many of the draftees now approaching the end of their service. The total of these is about 600,000. Many of them, having become familiar with the Army, and having already been detached from their ordinary peace-time employment and associations, might be willing to become regulars.

In addition we could renew the mechanism for stimulating enlistment of regulars, which was more or less dropped when we adopted the draft system. Whether we could attain the total of approximately 1,600,000 and attain it in time, is for Gen. Marshall and the other Army experts to say.

WHETHER OR NOT we can begin the two-part system now, there can be little question we would have done better to adopt it instead of the draft system a year ago. Much that we have done was awkward and wasteful, and is now being undone.

We took men up to 35 away from industries in which they were useful, and put them in military training, where they were little needed, and from which those over 28 are now being released. Some of the notions of a year ago are now seen as fantastic. How many remember that the original proposal was to register every male from 18 to 64, and put under draft all up to 45?

Sign Of The 'V'

By Barnet Nover

New Weapon In The War Of Nerves

There is no more welcome gift to men than a new symbol.
—EMERSON.

HOW IT BEGAN, by whom and where is not quite clear. The inhabitants of Occupied Europe live behind a high wall closely guarded by the Gestapo. But from time to time news from that vast concentration camp does manage to get out.

NOVER

Early this year it was learned that in Belgium the population was giving vent to its hatred of the conqueror by chalking defiant inscriptions on walls and doors. The writing was usually done in the dead of night. When day came the German authorities saw to it that the inscriptions were erased, sometimes taking punitive action against those deemed responsible. The next night the same inscriptions reappeared. Among them one was notable for its stark simplicity—the letter V.

WRITING on the wall is an old political habit in many parts of Europe. It was so prevalent in France that laws had to be passed by the chamber prohibiting the practice. It was so common in Italy that Mussolini saw to it, soon after he came into power, that the walls were covered with his pet slogans, such as, for instance, Believe! Obey! Fight!

The inscriptions that began to appear on Belgian walls this year were manifestations of passive resistance. The movement was individually initiated, the reflection of a spontaneous urge to express the loathing felt for the conqueror. And what was happening in Belgium was happening elsewhere in Europe as well. It may, therefore, be that the "V" symbol first made its appearance not in Belgium but in France or Holland. The important fact is not where it originated but that it soon began to spread.

British propaganda has tended to be far from effective in this war. The Nazis have had the jump on them in waging psychological warfare as in the field of military action. But somebody in London was wise enough to see the effective use to which the "V" symbol could be put. So beginning in April the B. B. C. broadcasts to Occupied Europe began to urge people everywhere to manifest their spirit of defiance, their hope of an ultimate victory over the Nazis, by making the widest use of the symbol.

IT IS A CAPITAL offense in the conquered countries to listen to foreign broadcasts, particularly those originating in Great Britain. The spread of the "V" campaign shows how little this drastic law operates to prevent such listening. By June the letter V had become the symbol of a silent crusade against the Nazis. Then people began to tap out the letter V in Morse code—three dots and a dash. Then the discovery was made that this rhythm was to be found repeated in endless variations in Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, now the Marseillaise of a new war for liberation.

What does "V" stand for? Alone it stands for the twenty-second letter in the English alphabet, the Roman symbol for five. But to the oppressed people of Europe it has taken on a far greater meaning. To the people of France and to the French-speaking Belgians it means "Victoire"—victory. To the people of Holland and Flanders it means "Vrijheit"—freedom. Repeated thrice Norwegians recognize it as an abbreviation for "ve vil vinne"—we will win. In all languages it means: "We are not alone." The man who wrote the V or whistled its musical counterpart or tapped it out in Morse code and the one who reads or listens to it form part of a great brotherhood: "We are weak today. We shall be strong tomorrow. We are disarmed but not conquered. We are fighting back. We shall triumph. We shall be free again."

THIS THEME of solidarity and hope the B. B. C.'s mysterious speaker, Col. V. Britton, has hammered home to the conquered peoples of Europe almost daily. And at the end of last week the movement was given official sanction by none other than Winston Churchill in a special broadcast.

In unity there is strength. Hitler has sought to unite Europe by transforming it into a continent of slaves ruled by a "master" race.

Writing the letter V on doors and walls will not give arms to the disarmed, destroy prison walls behind which 135,000,000 people are being held in subjection. But by enabling the conquered to express their feelings, the movement is nonetheless one of great potential significance. So much so indeed, that, acting on the theory that if you can't beat them you join them, the Nazis are now proclaiming that V means Viktoria—the victory of the German arms, or veni, vidi, vici, which they insist they have a greater right to say than did Caesar. But this clever ruse of appropriating the symbol of the enemy will not work. It comes too late. Besides, the German word for victory is not Viktoria—that is a word borrowed from Latin—but Sieg. Those in Germany and Austria who write V on their walls may have quite another word in mind—Vergeltung—revenge, for instance, as Erika Mann suggests, or Verdamt—damned or Vernichten—to wipe out.

In the meantime, R. A. F. squadrons flying in V formations over the Channel to their targets on the continent are reminding the people of Germany and the conquered peoples of Europe that V can also stand for vengeance.

British Reporter Describes Trip Over Desert in Martin Bomber

By Godfrey H. P. Anderson
English Journalist

With the R. A. F. in the Egyptian Desert, July 19 (Delayed).—United States-built planes are being used for a series of vitally important reconnaissance flights by the R. A. F. deep into neighboring Libya.

Acting as the eyes of all three services—navy, army and air force—the observers in these machines are keeping a constant check on any movements by the Germans and Italians and bring home the photographs that guide the R. A. F. in its increasing bombardment offensive.

I was the first war correspondent permitted to fly in one of the Glenn Martin Maryland bombers, which are doing this desert scouting.

Out Over the Desert

Today, seated at the observer's post in the glass nose of the plane, I saw the vast panorama of the Western Desert unfold thousands of feet below.

Down there men sweated and toiled, perfecting defenses in the blistering heat.

Trucks were crawling sluggishly over sandy tracks. Amid the rocks and stunted camel thorn they looked like lazy beetles. A steep escarpment which was a formidable barrier to tanks and infantry looked like no more than a bump in the ground. Only our tiny, racing shadow on the desert told our speed.

As the American engines pulled us ever higher the features of the landscape became blurred. But the young sergeant observer at my side could read it like a relief map. On an airfield, he recognized smudges as groups of aircraft and he told which were bombers and which were fighters.

A touch on a button—and an electrically operated camera exposed a strip of film which later would confirm what his keen eyes already had noted.

Films Rushed Away

Sweeping back over the sea we glimpsed naked British soldiers bathing in the shimmering Mediterranean. Some looked up and waved to the big Glenn Martin. Then back to the airfield where the big bombers were fueling and loading their bombs racks for a real raid.

The airmen ran out to meet us as the plane daintily touched the earth. One grabbed the roll of precious film and rushed it off to be developed for intelligence officers. Another called to the pilot:

"How she doing, sir? Engines okay?"

The armorer shouted:

"Guns all right, Jock?"

The tow-headed 21-year-old gunner answered:

"Beautiful."

Over in the commanding officer's tent the pilot and observer already were making their reports.

"That motor transport turned out to be only bushes, but we saw . . ."

The C. O. marked each item with a blue pencil on the transparent covering of his map. Tomorrow, after the bombers have done their work, some of the markings may be erased. Then the plane we rode, or another, will go back to photograph the damage.

Today's News Sidelight

Thousands of Red Soldiers Are of German Ancestry

"German-speaking Soviet soldiers" appear in the news from Moscow now and then. Who are they and how did they happen to be in the Russian armies? A bulletin from the National Geographic Society explains:

"Among the self-governing republics that make up the Soviet Union," says the bulletin, "is the largely German-populated 'Volga German Autonomous Soviet Socialist Republic,' which occupies an area almost as large as Belgium. It lies on both sides of the Volga River about 400 airline miles north of the Caspian Sea and 450 miles southeast of Moscow. More than two thirds of the republic is on the left bank of the Volga in the dry steppe region, but the most densely populated part is on the better-watered right bank of the river.

"Two thirds of the 605,000 people in the Volga German Republic are German by extraction and language. Russians and Ukrainians make up much of the balance. The republic is divided into 12 administrative districts, in six of which the language in use is German; in two, German and Russian; in two, German and Ukrainian, and in two others, German, Russian, and Ukrainian.

"In 1762, Catherine the Great invited colonists from western Europe, chiefly from German lands, to colonize the lower Volga region, which had been raided and ravaged for centuries by the Tatars. A special ministry, the 'Guardian Office for Foreigners,' was set up to handle the immigrants. German settlements sprang up all along the lower Volga between Voskresensk and what is now Stalingrad.

"From 1764 to 1773, about 8,000 families, totaling around 27,000 persons, founded 106 new foreign colonies. Swiss origin of some of the settlers is indicated by the use in their new home of such town names as Basle, Zurich, and Solothurn. An important grain center of the republic now is called Marksshtadt, for Karl Marx, the German whose theories of socialism formed the basis of Russia's government since 1918. The capital of the Volga German republic, formerly called Pokrovsk, now bears the name Engels, after the German economist who collaborated with Marx.

"The Volga Germans enjoyed certain privileges under the old regime in Russia, and they were the first ethnic or racial group to achieve autonomy under the Soviet government. Organized in 1918 as a 'labor commune,' the region became an autonomous republic in 1923. With its early granted cultural liberty went the right to give preference in filling local offices to its own nationals.

"The Volga German Republic is one of the most advanced areas of Russia. In 1936, there were 90,000 peasant householders, scores of libraries, and almost 200 village reading rooms. Agriculture is by far the leading occupation; the land is almost completely collectivized, and farmers use the most modern agriculture machinery. Hard wheat, sunflowers, and mustard are the chief crops; beef cattle are bred. Tremendous increases in agricultural production are expected to follow on the completion of the huge Left Volga region irrigation scheme, already under construction.

"The output of Volga German industry has increased at least 15 fold within the past 15 years. Machine building and lumber milling have been developed. In Engels there is a large meat 'combinat,' with a tannery and boneworks. Russian sources claim the establishment of several universities and technical schools in the republic, and say the region publishes 20 newspapers."

Voyagers of 1941 Recall Day in 1828 When President's Shovel Hit Root

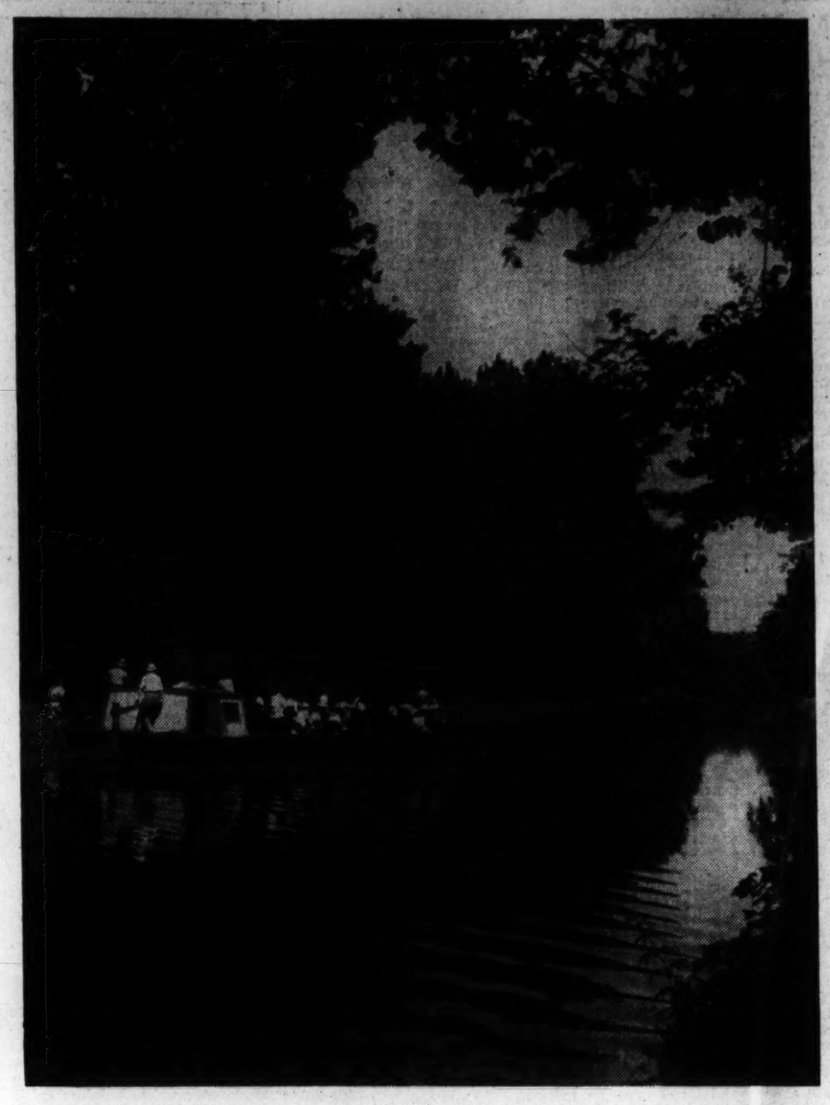
Tempo of Life Slackens as Barge Once Again Plies Historic Waterway

By Scott Hart
Post Staff Writer

PRESIDENT John Quincy Adams on July 4, 1828, seized a shovel, called it a "consecrated instrument" and performed a mighty swipe at the earth near Little Falls, starting work on the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal that would lead to the commerce of the West.

The consecrated instrument hit a root, an unsuitable ground-breaking gesture, and the President threw off his coat to attack the situation more vigorously. The cheers of the prominent assemblage died off in the surrounding honeysuckle and Adams said "I regard this event as the most important incident in my life."

Big things were to occur, from Cumberland, Md., to Georgetown—186 miles—and another one yesterday when 40 Washingtonians and Baltimoreans got on a flat-bottomed barge and were pulled by a horse named Margie from Chain Bridge to Carderock, Md. Another 40, the barge's capacity, rode down from Carderock to the bridge. The total cost, including bus fare, was $1.50.



The barge proceeds up the canal with Margie following the historic towpath

THE passenger adjectives were "wonderful, grand, marvelous, great, entertaining, educational, refreshing and oh!" They want the sponsoring National Park Service to run a trip by moonlight, though plans are for one each Sunday, the weather permiting. Private enterprisers, probably not realizing that the entertainment-seeking public would go for the things of the lemonade and the 4-mile-an-hour satin-vest era—missed the boat. The reservations office yesterday said its phones rang continuously, that it could have booked 500 passengers by noon with the one day's requests for seats.

The passengers recorded that the ride required three hours and 20 minutes, covered about 11 miles, passed 14 locks, slowed down life's tempo considerably and drew the admiring hand-waves and envious looks of spectators lined along the towpath over practically the entire distance.

PARK Naturalist Donald Edward McHenry and associates pointed out the favorite bird and flower of all aboard and the historic sites were indicated. Passengers reminisced. Back in Teddy Roosevelt's Administration, earlier and somewhat later, there was a farmhouse known only to Canal excursionists as "Dickey's", where all plunged off the barges to eat fried chicken.

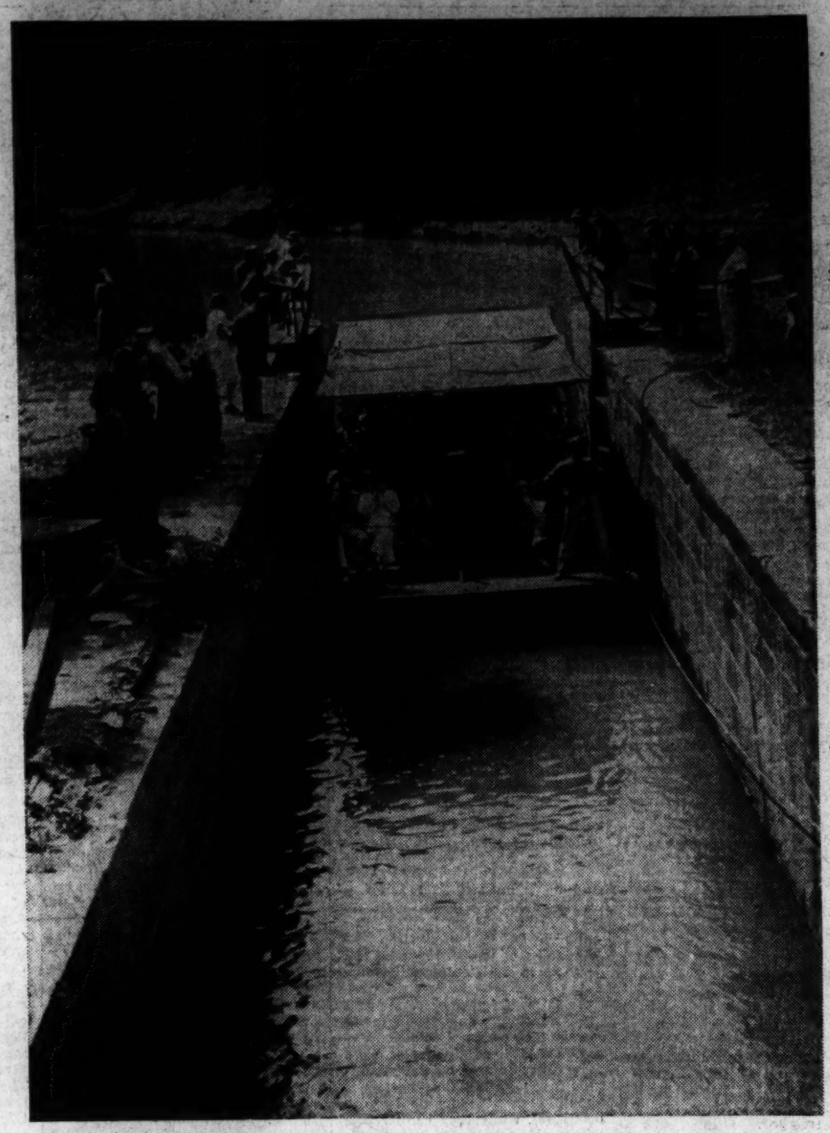
Then, passengers said, one can ride slowly enough this way through the historical environment to throw the present overboard, and without too much day-dreaming. They may pass the place, for example, where President James Polk rode on a barge, attended by friends and political gentlemen, the latter engaged profanely, vehemently, in election discourse. "He is a splendid candidate and I'll stand for him any time, blankety-blank," cried one, leaping to his feet to be knocked down on the barge floor by a low-hanging limb.

GEORGE Washington had ridden the region in 1784, inquiring into the possibilities of a canal up the Potomac Valley, had started the Potowmack Co. which the C. & O. Canal superseded. It had prosperous days.

In 1873 it transported 999,000 tons of coal; 540 barges were operating in 1870, bringing much coal and some farm produce down the 186 miles to Georgetown; barge captains were paid $120 a trip; freight charges averaged $1 a ton, and, of moonlight nights and fair days, very daring ladies and gentlemen flung themselves into the wild formal dissipation—the barge ride.

Vicissitudes unimaginable and often from floods beset the canal. Often financial interests backing it took bigger beatings than the mule that drew the barges, and often as uncomplainingly. Jubal Early's raiders tried to wreck the locks, muscles-in tried to wreck the business, the freshet of 1877 was a blow and the flood of 1889 was then declared as its finish. But it was operated until 1924, hauling coal at a loss, when three spring freshets interrupted what President Adams started with the consecrated instrument, 96 years before.

It's on the boom again. And they all said "it's just wonderful."



The barge enters lock No. 5. Through his lock countless tons of coal and farm produce—as well as romantic excursionists, passed in a century

One of the voyagers was Mrs. Miriam James, who made moving pictures of the trip. Almost everyone had a camera along

Bill Cunningham's Column: Hambone Kelly Might Have Been Champ—With Shoes

CUNNINGHAM

By Bill Cunningham

It has always been a matter of lingering artistic distress with me that Mr. Mucker McGrath became so confoundedly bumfuzzled over something or other that evening that he proceeded to the ball park without Mr. Hambone Kelly's personal satchel. I've always been of the impression that if Mr. Kelly had won that one, he probably would have gone on to one of the major pugilistic championships, and if that semimiracle had ever come to pass, the world might have had another spider-legged hitter to mention in the same bracket with the freckled Bob Fitzsimmons.

The horrific Hambone could hit like the crack of doom. A port-sider by nature, he was really a switch hitter. He merely seemed to turn his wrist a little toward the inside with a slight push forward, like a man shooting his cuff to look at his wrist watch, but opponents went down as if machinegun fire had suddenly cut the legs from under them.

The principal trouble was they weren't much opponents. The Bone never could be made to take any of it very seriously. An anvil chinned Gael from South Boston, the Kerry Patch of that storied bourne where the Cabots speak only to God, Mr. Kelly—the first name was really Joe—was one of those rare and uninhibited children of nature who simply couldn't be bothered.

If anybody wanted to fight, sure, he'd fight, and if they wanted a ring and rounds and all, that was all right with him. His manager of record was a neighborhood Boy Scout, Mr. Mucker McGrath, now a Boston politician of some prominence, and Mucker at the time was considerable pumpkins in the pugilistic patch because he was flapping the towel on a new and likewise local Irish heavyweight, Jim Maloney.

Because of this high estate, Mucker was able to make arrangements for the Mighty Bone to meet Paul Berlenbach, then the world's light heavyweight champion, in an evening soiree at the Boston National League Baseball Park, and it was apparently all right with the Bone although it's extremely doubtful that he knew or cared exactly whom or what he was going to fight.

Mr. McGrath, however, was very excited about it, so excited, in fact, that when time came to depart from a Back Bay hotel wherein he'd had the Hambone incarcerated, he forgot to include the grip that had Kelly's gear in it; and when the locus belli was reached, they were fresh out of tights, shoes and things. There wasn't time to send back for their own, and in this dire emergency, they managed to borrow the regalia of a welterweight who had completed a stint on the preliminary card, but, to be guilty of a brash understatement, they fit our hero much, much too soon.

All of it was bad, but the most acute difficulty came in the matter of the dogs, or feet. The Kelly trilbies were approximately the size of kites, and these shoes were never made for that type of area.

Mr. Kelly teetered forth to war that evening like a freshly barefoot kid on a gravel path, but he hit the champion of the world a lefthanded bombshell flush upon the bonnie, blue whiskers that made his eyes spin like two loose vest buttons and his knees buckle like a Mohammedan kneeling to pray. Berlenbach will still tell you that the hardest punch he ever stopped in his life came "from a guy named Kelly up in Boston."

But that was practically all there was to it. Berlenbach, who had a chin of solid oak, didn't take the count, although another clip half as hard would probably have finished him. But Mr. Kelly wasn't clipping any more that night. Instead he had turned toward his corner and ordered, "Trow in de towel."

"Go on. Go on. Fight him. You've got him groggy," excitedly shrilled Mucker. "Hit 'im again. Let him have that left."

"Nuts," responded Mr. Kelly, "My dogs hurt. These shoes are killin' me."

"You give it to him," called the Bone, and practically simultaneously, Berlenbach weaved back out of his coma, smacked Kelly in the puss, or face, and the Bone had little time to think about his feet for the rest of the round.

The affair progressed for the four stanzas, with Kelly threatening to quit and McGrath pleading with him to use mind over matter. Finally Berlenbach nailed the gentleman and he dropped to take the full toll. He was already reaching for his shoe laces before the referee finished.

If Kelly had had his own fiddle cases, he might have won that one, and if he had, he might have gone on. As it was, he lapsed back into the neighborhood trade, where he still is, incidentally, lolling around in the sun these summery days and not worrying about anything in particular.

But he could hit!

He didn't need gloves. In fact, he was better without them. A fellow told me about watching him wade in one night to the assistance of a friendly cop set upon by a dozen toughs trying to rescue a prisoner. They said you'd see first one Kelly shoulder, then the other, move forward ever so slightly. Each time, a tough's feet would rise about 6 inches from the ground, his head about 6 inches above the crowd level. That would be another one on the ground cold as Christmas Eve in Labrador.

I was just perusing a pseudo-scientific article upon Mr. Lou Nova's celebrated "cosmic punch," and it went on to presume to talk about "hitting." This happened to be one guy in my town—you've probably got 'em in yours—who couldn't tell you why, nor how, but who only started hitting where most of the rest of these fellows stopped.

"Champion of the world" is a glamorous misnomer. It means champion of a variety of the regulated art. These others are the gents who could take any of 'em on a street corner. It depends upon what kind of fighting you're talking about.

Exhibitors Seem Lukewarm on Pet Project; Bette Better Than Her Boisterous Farce; News and Notes of the Amusement World

THOSE STRICTLY TRADE SHOWINGS of forthcoming motion picture releases, inaugurated throughout the country last week by the major producers, in compliance with the so-called "Consent Decree," abolishing "block booking," met with decidedly spotty response on the part of the exhibitors it was designed to benefit.

BETTE DAVIS

Perhaps it was too much to expect that the ladies and gentlemen exercising control over the box-offices could change their habits over night and make up their own minds as to which pictures are good and which not so good without the advantage of advance tips from the lay press. It can easily be read between the lines of all reports coming out of the proceedings that the response to the special dispensation in their behalf, on the part of those who had kicked most vigorously for it, was disappointing to the companies that went to the trouble of showing off their films far in advance of release dates. Some of the latter even went so far as to declare it not worth the time, trouble and expense.

Hoosiers First, Nutmegs Last

Indianapolis seems to have made the best showing, with 400 exhibitors on hand to give the celluloids a squint; New Haven, the worst with only 16. Forty-five turned out in New York to attend the RKO-Radio previews, the first to be turned on for their greater enlightenment. That doesn't sound like too many for the metropolis, but the 45 are said to have represented something like 270 theaters. That isn't so bad.

But, getting down to brass tacks instead of brass hats, the point is that exhibitors don't know any more about picking films than anybody else, in or out of the industry, who has grown up with the business. Perhaps their diffidence may be attributed to the fact that they don't want their fallibiliy to become too widely known.

This department wishes to be included out of any contention that Bette Davis has no right to attempt to be a comedienne, with "The Bride Came C. O. D.," current at the Earle Theater, as the clincher of the argument. The Bette Davis who appears in the title role of that more or less rough-house farce is a great deal more like the briskly spontaneous young actress we first met almost a decade ago than the Bette Davis, for example, of "Jezebel," "Dark Victory," "The Old Maid," "All This and Heaven, Too" or "Juarez." Actually, she is no murky tragedienne, but a high-spirited, effervescent and witty young woman. Whatever ails Bette Davis—if anything does—in "The Bride," is the fault of the Epstein boys, who wrote the piece, and their predilection for spines—both cactus and Miss Davis', utilized as a target for Jimmy Cagney's unerring slingshot. They evidently were stuck on the idea—Bette with it. We're on her side.

So the Foothill Goes to Mohamet

Because there are not as yet enough prints of the picture in the East to serve current needs, and there cannot, therefore, be a preview of "Sergeant York" in Washington, the Warner Brothers functionaries are taking the drama desks to New York tomorrow to view the film at the Astor Theater, where it is playing at $2.20 top and packing 'em in. Some will plane up, some will train up and some of us, heaven forbid, may even walk, against the coming of the business to the Earle and Ambassador theaters this monthend. Unless we land on a cactus plant, more of this later—much more.

On the possibility that a propitious fate may make it permissible for the piece to play here somethine, it is worth noting that on August 18, Howard Lindsay and Dorothy Stickney will leave the New York cast of "Life With Father" for a vacation in New England. Their places on that date will be taken by Percy Waram and Margalo Gillmore. Upon their return, Miss Gillmore will succeed Lillian Gish opposite Mr. Waram in the first road company, scheduled for a wide tour in the fall. In the meantime, the Dorothy Gish-Louis Calhern "Life With Father" company continues to bowl over records at the Cass Theater in Detroit.

Tomorrow night at 8:15, the Department of Agriculture (AAA), is screening "Harvests for Tomorrow" in the department auditorium . . . To be publicly shown at the Metropolitan, beginning Friday . . . And today at 1, the entertainment wing of the Committee for National Defense is lunching at the Raleigh to map future plans . . . The Variety Club's golf tournament and dinner dance will be held at the Manor Country Club on August 22, which is by way of being a Friday . . . Tickets for a full day of indoor and outdoor carryings-on, $7.50 a copy. . . . Broken down into golf, tennis, swimming, bridge, gin rummy, mah jong, dinner and dance, that's cheap as dirt.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

Short-Reels Vie With News At Trans-Lux

Though top speed is set by the news section for the current week at the Trans-Lux Theater, the short subject division sustains the rapid tempo of instruction and thrilling entertainment.

A very definite factor is "The Red Army," a graphic picture of Russia in action—her army, navy and air force, mighty and seemingly invincible.

The news section is topped with the British troops entering Damascus to end the Syrian campaign. Equally interesting are the pictures of the fall of Bagdad and the unwarranted Nazi bombing of Alexandria, Egypt. From England, comes the Fourth of July celebration, both in London and at the ancestral home of Washington, while a British destroyer is shown sinking a German tanker. England also honors Russian army chiefs, as Anthony Eden makes a brilliant address emphasizing "No peace with Hitler." American nurses arrive in London and U. S. Marines make a snappy appearance at the American Embassy there.

Plenty at Home, Too

At home, shots include Secretary Ickes' New York speech against Lindbergh; Axis consuls leaving on the S. S. West Point; Director Knudsen inspecting West Coast plane plants; a new method of ferrying Army trucks across rivers, at Fort Benning; flying cadets at Kelly Field and a new one-man submarine test at Jacksonville, Fla. Something new from the farm shows circular threshing with a radio controlled tractor—and, it works!

On the lighter side is a beauty contest at Conev Island; a kiddies miniature zoo within the Bronx Zoo, and sand-sailing at Sea Island, Ga.

The sports world is headlined with the horse owner's dream, Wright Stables' three fast ones coming in one, two, three, at Arlington Park, Ill., while at the same track Whirlaway once more thrills the fans. There is the P. G. A. golf championship won by Vic Ghezzi, at Denver, and there are water ski enthusiasts at Santa Barbara. Caballero College shows the finest horsemanship ever displayed, with the cream of the Chilean cavalry going through their beautiful maneuvers. The cartoon is "Dumb Like a Fox."

Mother in Disguise

Little Joan, 2-year-old adopted daughter of Frances Robinson, was a bewildered youngster. Accompanied by Mrs. Alice Ladd, Miss Robinson's mother, she thought she was to visit her "Mommy." Then she couldn't find her. Miss Robinson wore a make-up of a 70-year-old woman for her role of housekeeper in "Smilin' Through." Joan still doesn't believe she saw her mother.

—LEONARD LYONS—

A Linguistic Puppet

New York, July 20.

The European correspondents have reported that the Nazi new order in Europe might bring to the throne of a defeated Russia the grandson of Kaiser Wilhelm, Prince Louis Ferdinand—whose wife, Princess Kyra, is a Romanoff . . . The Prince is a linguist and he speaks "Detroit" and "Gordon." He describes his English as "Detroit"—because in the machine shops of that city he learned the censorable phrases which he uses frequently. And he describes his Russian as "Gordon" because he learned the best expletives of that language from Leon Gordon, the artist who painted his portrait under a commission from the late Kaiser.

NOEL COWARD

It was to Gordon that Prince Louis Ferdinand addressed a series of letters from Doorn, the last refuge of the Hohenzollern dynasty—and signed these notes "Your jackass friend" . . . And when, during his honeymoon with Kyra, the couple visited the President at Hyde Park, they returned to New York, and went to Gordon's studio . . . Well, how'd you like it at Hyde Park?" the artist asked. . . . "It was most enjoyable," the Prince reported. "We all did whatever we pleased. There were no formalities at all" . . . "And what one impression did you take away with you?" Gordon asked . . . "It was so informal," replied the man who may, if the world crashes, become the Nazi puppet in the Romanoff throne, "it was so democratic you'd think you were in a royal household."

Diana Barrymore recently was amazed when an R. A. F. pilot, who visited her on a Friday afternoon, asked for a Wednesday evening date—although he was scheduled to ferry a bomber to England and then return to New York, all within five days . . . Miss Barrymore consented to the date—but the pilot didn't return here until the following Friday . . . "It took you seven days instead of five to make that round-trip to London," Diana reminded him. "What detained you?" . . . "I had a two-day job to do," was his matter of fact reply, "over Hamburg and Bremen."

Herbert Agar, the Louisville editor, is going to London . . . Paul Patterson, publisher of the Baltimore Sun, leaves for Lisbon today . . . Sergt. York, the one-time pacifist, has become the chairman of the Tennessee Fight for Freedom Committee . . . Stephen Vincent Benet, the Pulitzer Prize poet, has moved to a house in Stonington, Conn. Benet will permit his friends to hang any paintings they want to on the walls of his house—except a copy of "Whistler's Mother." His house is the one in which Whistler's mother really lived . . . H. L. Mencken gave full expression to his boyhood dreams last night when he signed a contract with John Ringling North to tour with the Ringling Bros. circus next season as a clown. The salary fixed was $11 a week.

Harold Ross, the magazine editor, told North this story about John's uncle, the late John Ringling: During the Broadway run of Noel Coward's "Private Lives" he and Coward went to the circus at Madison Square Garden. Coward was in a gay mood, for he was young and famous and all was well with his world . . . From their box they spied Mr. Ringling. "I'll ask him to allow us to go backstage," said Noel. He approached Ringling, introduced himself and reminded the circus-man that Gilbert Miller once had introduced them. Ringling was politely formal and asked: "What are you doing now?" . . . The chagrined playwright and star muttered an embarrassed reply. He resolved to write more and better plays—until even John Ringling would know what he was doing . . . This professional sting smarted for two years—until Coward discovered that Ringling hadn't seen a show in 26 years.

Gertrude Lawrence, who is vacationing from "Lady in the Dark," is working at Dennis, Mass., this week, appearing in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" as well as five benefits for the British War Relief Society . . . Lester Stone, the Mayor's secretary, is walking on crutches now—but still is working full time . . . Last week Allyn Joslyn, of "Arsenic and Old Lace," won $257 on a $2 ticket at the Empire City track. Joslyn met Grantland Rice and boasted of this accomplishment in the field of sports. "$257 for $2 isn't sports," Rice corrected. "That's high finance" . . . A New Yorker bought the convertible roadster in which Harry Vance Maxwell was murdered. His gruesome joke is to drive his friends to the spot where the murder occurred and then add the detail that they were sitting in that very car.

The United States Treasury Department now has all the printing plates for Irving Berlin's song, "Any Bonds Today?" Berlin, who presented the copyright to the Treasury Department, can't get a copy of that song without first writing to the Treasury for it . . . Because of the sudden interest in Iceland the proprietor of the Iceland Restaurant is opening a smorgasbord chain in the major cities.

Mickey's Pal

It would seem that Dick Paxton, Mickey Rooney's friend and former stand-in, will never realize his ambition to be in a Hardy picture. Dick has been wanting to be in a Hardy picture ever since he first stood-in for Mickey in the first of the Hardy films. Mickey telephoned him two days ago to tell him he had been chosen for a small part—but Dick had just been signed for another picture.

Premature All That Mature Talk!

Hollywood, Calif., July 20. With all this talk about the Vic Matures separating, Vic tells me his bride is arriving tomorrow. In the meantime, he's waiting for her to select their house and he's been living in Carl Schroeder's garage. When chided about it, he said, "Why not? It's more comfortable than the tent I used to live in, in Pasadena."

VICTOR MATURE

When his wife was told by long distance phone about the rumors, she said, "Listen, you ask that dame, who's been predicting, what she'd do if she had a toothache, that is if she's got any teeth? 'Cause I've been spending my days in the dentist's chair."

That luscious Lucia Carroll is pretty perturbed. She fell off of a "skooter bug" and has a 3-inch scar on one of her legs . . . Doug McPhail, now that his divorce suit is hanging on the line, is asking for a suspension of his contract at Metro. He'll enlist in the service and if he doesn't get in, he'll join a construction crew to help build muscle and brawn. All this because he hasn't been kept busy enough in pictures and is aching for work. Well, boy! He'll be aching!

They certainy fixed up Garson Kanin when he joined up at that Army camp. Seems his family went along to make sure that he was done right by. They looked over his quarters and said . . . "Surely they're not going to ask you to sleep THERE! You mean to say that's the kind of FOOD you get? And they expect you to wash in THAT!" . . . Which bored the rest of the boys no end, who'd been doing it for many weeks, so they've got our big-shot director Garson Kanin polishing the pots and pans on K. P.

In dining with Alfred de Liagre, jr., and reminiscing about the Yale boys (whom I've always had a fondness for) it developed that he was of the graduating class of 1926, out of which came many men who have distinguished themselves in the artistic world . . . Among them, George Murphy, Rudy Vallee, Jock Whitney, Director Hank Potter, Peter Arno, orchestra leader Ben Cutler, Broadway actor John Hayvradt, and Joseph Verner Reed . . . that was certainly a vintage year for Yale!

Orson Welles tells this one on himself. Coming out of the Club 21, when he was in New York recently, he was mobbed by a group of autograph seekers. One boy had Orson give him his signature seven times and after Orson had obliged, the kid rushed over to a companion and yelled . . . "Here's your seven Welles, come on now, give me that Clark Gable!"

And Bob Stack was recognized while passing the Hollywood High School the other day and barely escaped with his life . . . says when it comes to tangling with a bunch of femme autograph hounds, give him a Bengal tiger, any day!

Ona Munson tells me the only harm Belle Watling, in "G. W. T. W.," did her is that it's given producers the idea she's a hefty dame . . . "When they call me for a part," she says, "they give the once-over and say, 'Ye Gods! where are the curves?' . . . and I say . . . 'over in Metro Props!'"

In "New Orleans Blues," Wally Ford plays a lame man and just to make sure he wouldn't forget to limp, he's wearing a couple of marbles in the toe of one shoe and a lift in the heel . . . Jerry Colonna, who can't skate a lick, is playing a comedy role in Republic's "Ice-capades" . . . so they've built him a pair of skates with double runners, like a sled . . . The big shots!

Memories of Ring

Hollywood, July 20. (INS).—Heard rumbles that Jack Warner was dickering with Mrs. Corbett to buy the life story of James J. Corbett for Errol Flynn and today Jack confirmed the rumor. He told me that he had bought the biography of the man who wrested the title of heavyweight champion from John L. Sullivan. Known as "Gentleman Jim," the Adonis of the fight ring, Corbett was one of the most colorful prize fighters. He changed the idea that a pug always wears loud clothes, has cauliflower ears and is a "dese, dem and dose guy."

VIVIEN LEIGH

Always immaculately dressed and always the gentleman, Corbett captured the American fancy and was a great public idol until he was defeated by Jim Jeffries, Jeffries, still alive, lives here and it is possible he will be called into the picture. The glamorous gay nineties, the era of "Gentleman Jim's" career, will give the movie color and interest. It's to be Errol's next and it's interesting that his weight—185 pounds, and Corbett's, are similar.

Must admit that at first I listened to the "hot" tip from Para that David Rose would be commissioned to offer Vivien Leigh the Para studio lock, stock and barrel, if she will play Maria in "For Whom the Bell Tolls," with my tongue in my cheek. Vivien is in England and no one, not even David Selznick who owns her contract, knows when she will return. But perhaps there's more to the tip than meets the eye. If Stirling Hayden gets the role of Robert Jordon (and he is the leading candidate) then the picture will need a very big woman's name to help carry it. Betty Field is not strong enough to carry it alone. Someone argued, "Well, no one knew Vivien Leigh when Selznick gave her 'Gone With the Wind.'" But, my friends, they knew Clark Gable and even best sellers need top box-office draws.

Pity the poor "woiking" girl no longer! Ginger Rogers, prototype of our white collar brigade, signed for her first outside picture from RKO today to play another glorified Tillie, the Toiler, in "Self-made Cinderella," the first Ernst Lubitsch-Twentieth Century-Fox opus. If ever an actress got to the top playing the average girl, it is Ginger. She walked off with the academy award for "Kitty Foyle," in which she played a secretary. In "Tom, Dick and Harry" she is a telephone operator and in "Self-made Cinderella" she will be another business girl.

Mrs. Garrett Leaving For New York Visit

Will Motor to Staten Island Today With Daughter, Mrs. Koehler, to Spend Some Time With Mrs. H. C. Northcutt

By Elizabeth Henney

In an unusual departure from her summer custom Mrs. Finis J. Garrett is leaving Washington today, but only for a very short while. She and her daughter, Mrs. Ben G. Koehler, will leave this morning to motor to Staten Island to visit Mrs. H. C. Northcutt at the Northcutt's new home on Emerson Hill.

For several years Judge and Mrs. Garrett have been "at home" in the Capital all summer and very happily so. For while most Washingtonians strain frantically to "get away somewhere" during the sizzling months, or "just grin and bear it somehow" because there's nothing else they can do about it, the Garretts just relax in the comfort of having "found the answer" right on their own doorstep.

They wisely bought a house a few years ago on one of the highest points of ground in the city. And there, shaded by tall old trees, they spend every possible moment at their Louisiana plantation type home of white painted brick, where two long galleries are swept by cooling breezes during even the hottest days and where three icy springs gurgle and splash into delightful lily ponds in their own back yard.

No wonder they "haven't any special plans for the summer," and haven't had since 1937 when they bought the home. Before that they used to go back to their old home town of Dresden, Tenn., special plans for the summer." The last few years, however, they have kept the Tennessee home leased.

There is no need for the Garretts to go out and seek the world, either, for the true Southern hospitality, the latchstring is always out, and the world comes seeking them. As a result the house on Springland Lane is always full of house guests, either arriving, departing or overlapping and life is a constant, gay houseparty.

Accompanying Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Koehler on today's trip are the latter's two children, Suzanne, 12, and Virginia, 10. The Koehlers arrived in town about three weeks ago from their home in Geneva, Nebr., and will be in the East for several weeks longer.

Springland Lane Reunion in New York

The trip to New York will be somewhat of a "Springland Lane" reunion, for Mrs. Northcutt's mother, Mrs. H. E. C. Bryant, now at Emerson Hill, is a neighbor of Mrs. Garrett's. In fact the Garretts and the Bryants have been best friends and next door neighbors for 30 years or more, ever since Judge Garrett came to Washington, first to represent Tennessee in Congress, and for the last several years to make his State proud of him in his present position as presiding judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

A few days ago Mrs. Northcutt came down to Washington with her youngest son, Sumner, aged 6, after seeing the 12-year-old son, Buck, off for the summer to Half-Moon Camp in Great Barrington, Mass.

With Mrs. Northcutt at that time were Mr. Northcutt's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. C. Dean Thorpe of New London, Mo., and the three Thorpe children, Shirley, Dorothy Jean and C. Dean Thorpe, jr. The Thorpes, after a tour of the East, and a visit in New York, stopped over here with the Northcutts and the Bryants en route home. When the Thorpes went on to Missouri, Mrs. Bryant accompanied her daughter back to New York.

Parties and Picnics Held for Visitors

During the Thorpe visit, however, Springland Lane was a festival spot, for the Garretts too were houseguesting, and many were the parties and picnics for the visitors. At Judge and Mrs. Garrett's were Mrs. Garrett's nephew, John R. Costen, jr., son of Mrs. Garrett's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Costen, of McKenzie, Tenn., and young Costen's classmate, Bill Ford of Shreveport, La. The two boys are now stationed on the "U. S. Prairie States," off New York, training ship for Naval Reserves.

Also house guest of the Garretts that same week were Warren Hearn of the FBI, down for a few days' visit from New York, and young Hugh Wilkens of Geneva, Neb., son of the Garretts' old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wilkens of that city.

While Mrs. Garrett is away, Judge Garrett will visit for a day or two with his son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Burns Garrett at their new home in Buckingham Village, Arlington and the home on Springland Lane will be momentarily deserted. But it would be safe to predict that within a week the Garretts will have reassembled and the cool white house will again be oozing houseguests and happiness at every pore.

Mr. and Mrs. David Anderegg, whose wedding took place on Saturday, will make their home in Hartford, Conn., following their wedding trip to the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Nicholson Sisters Plan New York Visit

Early next week Miss Stratton Nicolson and her sister, Alice, will be off for Long Island for a months visit. Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Nicholson, of Wesley Heights, the girls will visit their grandmother, Mrs. A. T. Vance at the latter's estate Bramble Patch.

They will return the first week in September to plan for a possible debut later in the season. Whatever the date selected, it will have to be on a holiday as both girls will be off to college this fall, Stratton to enter her second year at Connecticut College, at New London Conn.; and Alice, who was graduated in June from Western High School here, to enter Sweet Briar in Virginia.

The tall, graceful and athletic Nicolson girls have long been popular in the Capital younger set, and are especially active in outdoor sports. Fond of tennis, swimming and boating of all kinds, they are expert sailors.

Stratton, in her second college year, has already decided what her major and main interests in life will be and is concentrating on courses in child psychology and development as preliminaries to training for work in nursery schools and with preschool children.

On their return in the fall, the two girls plan to entertain at a number of parties before starting off for college.

Freelands On Bridal Tour

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Theodore Freeland, who were married on Saturday in Governor's Island, N. Y., are now on their wedding trip in New England.

The former Miss Eleanor Martin Loughran, daughter of Mrs. Eleanor M. Loughran, of Montclair, N. J., and Mr. Freeland, son of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Freeland, of 4409 Lowell Street, Washington, were married at the Chapel of Our Lady, Star of the Sea, at a 4:05 afternoon ceremony. The Rev. John L. Cunningham officiated.

The bride's brother, Alexius Michael Loughran, gave her in marriage. She was gowned in white faille, trimmed with princess lace from her mother's wedding gown, and wore her mother's tulle wedding veil, fastened to her hair by a tiara of rose point lace which had belonged to the bride's grandmother, the late Mrs. Genevieve Walker. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of album lilies, white roses and baby's breath.

Genevieve Loughran, sister of the bride, was her maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in blue faille, fashioned like the bridal gown, wore flowers in her hair and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of yellow roses and delphinium.

John C. Freeland, jr., was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Daniel S. Loughran, brother of the bride, and Harold H. Everett, of New York City, both now stationed at the Naval Air base at Norfolk, Va.

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the apartment of Stanton Griffis, in New York City. The bride's mother was gowned in white chalk crepe and wore a corsage of orchids. The mother of the bridegroom wore a frock of powder blue with dark blue accessories and carried an old-fashioned purse corsage of roses and bluies.

The bride was graduated from the Academy of the Sacred Heart in Maplehurst, N. J., and is descended from the Carrolls of Carrollton. The bridegroom, who was graduated from Western High School here is now on duty with the 101st Cavalry at Fort Devens, Mass.

Mrs. Keyes Gives Party In 'Tradition'

When Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes recently bought and restored the lovely old colonial house in Alexandria, where she now makes her home, she named it Tradition. In the few short months since she moved into it, the parties she gives there have already developed a traditional informality, gaiety, and a charm all their own.

Last evening's party, scheduled to begin "sometime after seven," was entirely according to tradition, and guests who began dropping in at the specified hour, lingered on far into the night.

Mint Juleps On Schedule

Mint julips were on the schedule for the early part of the evening, and tall frosted glasses of the beverage (made from a famous recipe) were handed to the guests as they strolled through the house or on the terrace to watch the dusk deepening into darkness through the flower-scented garden.

Later, the dining room beckoned, with its buffet laden with salads, cheeses and a great roast of beef, as a change from the usual buffet ham and chicken. There too it was discovered that the hostess was celebrating her birthday. An enormous white-iced pink cake was brought in blazing with candles, and Mrs. Keyes assured the guests that the correct number of candles were present, and that any one who was interested was welcome to count them.

Her Publishers Here for Event

Down from New York for the occasion were Mrs. Keyes' publishers, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Messner, who were combining a business and party trip, for they had come to town the day before to look over the manuscript of Mrs. Keyes' next book, and take it back with them to begin work on the publication of it.

Representative Charles Dewey, of Illinois and Mrs. Dewey dropped in early and another from the Congressional contingent was Representative Mary T. Norton of New Jersey; as was Representative Margaret Smith of Maine.

Still others among the gay group were Commander and Mrs. Theodore Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Keating, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, Clarence Hewes, Pendleton Hogan, Miss May Craig, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wootten.

Latin Diplomats Asked to Concert At Watergate

The diplomatic representatives of 20 Latin-American countries have been invited to be the guests of the National Symphony Orchestra at its "Sunset Symphonies" concert of Pan-American music Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Potomac Watergate. The program will feature the Brazilian soprano, Elsie Houston, internationally famous for her singing of South American voodoo and folk songs, and will be conducted by Alexander Smallens.

With the exception of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, the entire program on Thursday night will be comprised of music of the Americas. Miss Houston will sing five tribal songs of South American Indians arranged by Villa-Lobos, a Cuban magic song, a Portuguese love song, two Brazilian compositions and some of the voodoo songs with percussion accompaniment for which she is famous. The orchestra will play Aaron Copland's "Outdoor Overture," San Juan's "Iniciacion-Ritual Negra," and the Beethoven "Fifth."

Social, Diplomatic Leaders Attend Mrs. McLean's Party

At another of her famous parties at Friendship, her estate on Wisconsin Avenue, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean entertained at dinner last evening. Brilliant, as McLean parties always are, the guest list was a cross section combination of diplomatic blue-book, social register and official and Congressional directories.

The dinner itself was at 8:30 and guests, after greeting their hostess in the flower-banked drawing room, found cocktails and hors d'oeuvres everywhere they turned. The dinner? A McLean party, be it luncheon or dinner, is of a perfection to make a gourmet swoon with rapture, and last evening's was no exception. Still later, the guests were treated to a special showing of a newly released motion picture, which was shown in the long ballroom.

Heading the list of distinguished guests were the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil, the Finnish Minister and Madame Procope, Justice Frank Murphy, Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Senator and Mrs. Hiram Johnson, Senator Theodore Green, Senator Robert Reynolds, Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, and Senator James J. Davis.

Also Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, the Judge Advocate General of the Army; the Commandant of the Navy Yard, Rear Admiral George T. Pettengill and Mrs. Pettengill, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Representative Lawrence Lewis, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas of Texas, The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Adolf A. Berle, jr., and Sir Willmott and Lady Lewis.

Still others included Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Russell L. Maxwell; Glenn Martin from Baltimore who was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Minta Martin; William Gray Elmslie, attache of the British Embassy; former Senator Henry Ashhurst, Dr. and Mrs. Winifred Overholser, former Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mr. and Mrs. Max Truitt, Charles Michelson, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, and many more.

R. W. Blisses Hold Forum After Lecture

From Santa Barbara, Calif., comes word of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who recently turned over their Washington home to Harvard University.

Always interested in international affairs the former envoy from the United States to Sweden and the Argentine and Mrs. Bliss gathered a number of notables at Casa Dorinda, their Santa Barbara villa, on Friday evening to hear their guest, Carlton Smith, speak on "Our World After Hitler."

Mr. Smith, noted commentator and student of world affairs, who has been spending the past fortnight as a house guest of the Blisses, knows whereof he speaks. For he has attended the Wagnerian opera festivals in Bayreuth with Hitler, traveled some 40,000 miles around the Soviet Union collecting folk songs, after which he interviewed Stalin and Molotov, and has just recently returned from an extensive tour of the countries of South America.

After telling his distinguished assemblage of his conversations with the political leaders of the two continents, Mr. Smith led an informal forum which included Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Stanley McCormick, Mrs. Stow-Fithian, Mme. Alfred Cpalowska, Mrs. Stanhope Nixon, Gen. William Lassiter, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ripley, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunter, Emil Ludwig, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Gladwyn, Gen. and Mrs. Charles H. McKinstry, and several others.

This party was one of a series of several such discussions of world affairs by famous visitors to the West Coast, which have been sponsored at Casa Dorina by the Blisses. Carlton Smith, who will be off soon on an air trip to Alaska, will spend several weeks in Beverly Hills before returning to the East.

New Fall Draperies Feature Dressmaker Fabrics

Good decorating can be practical and economical, for today's fabrics are firmly woven and color-tested to stand wear and to keep the new look after laundering. The bedroom pictured here shows the Georgian influence with its inlaid chests, gilded Adam mirrors, and Chinese print draperies swooping over cornice. The red and white bedspreads over green petticoats and the upholstered headboards with little buttons, are both modern and brisk.

Post Household Editor

THE SMARTLY dressed woman keeps up with the styles and the changes and adaptations of them. The homemaker who would keep her home keyed to new trends and improvements keeps up with the times in interior decoration of home furnishings.

Martha Ellyn

Interior decorators look to the Chicago summer showings of home furnishings as keenly as the fashion followers do to the New York fashion showings. The annual Chicago drapery show held recently was attended by Washington decorators and department store representatives.

What are the straws in the wind as regards draperies for fall and winter as revealed at this show? For one thing, the use of sharkskin. "This fabric," reports one returned decorator, "which has been used for some time to make men's and women's clothing, was introduced as a material for making attractive draperies and bedspreads."

That interior decoration takes many of its cues from the fashion field is again evidenced by the introduction of sharkskin. This spring and summer pique has been used effectively in household decorations, while its major use has in former years been for clothing.

Sharkskin as woven today is a very dependable material, because of its firm weave and its excellent laundering quality. Then, too, it comes in a tremendous range of colors, and is inexpensive.

Other "straws in the wind" learned about from decorators returning from the Chicago drapery show are as follows:

Prints—Have the interest rather than plain colors. Are designed to harmonize perfectly, carrying a feeling of unity in a room.

Correlated Fabrics and Designs—A typically American innovation, efficient and practical. Takes much of the guesswork out of slip cover problems. Slip covers are now popular the year around.

Fabric Groups—Each of a different texture and weave, but colored and designed so that a selection may be made to use together in one room.

Companion Stripes—Floral stripe superimposed on a wide-striped ground and a climbing floral stripe effect for the complementary print. Both available in fast colors and preshrunk fabrics.

Printed Velveteens—Attractive multicolored.

Glass Curtains—A feature development in glass curtains made of rayon is that piece-dyed colors will stand 200 hours of exposure to the fadeometer without change of color.

Water Color Prints—Featured in dainty florals in light colors, such as tiny nosegays. Offered in pale blues, yellows, aqua, grass green and other pastels on eggshell grounds.

Taffeta—Plain taffeta offered in colors matching the dominant print shades for swag treatment with printed draperies. Water color striped taffeta with stripes one-third of an inch wide and repeating the featured print colors.

Twin Prints—In taffeta and ninon.

Crisp Textured Fabrics—Resembles popular sportsweave material, only the slubs are not so definite.

Sharkskin—Formerly a material used for tailored suits and dresses, now has invaded the decoration field. Can be well adapted for use in contemporary rooms where the use of tailored fabrics is important. Available in a large assortment of colors.

Shadow Print Ninon—A new ivy pattern on neutral and pastel grounds.

Rough Weave Rayons and Rough Weave Cottons—Trend continues in these materials.

Vacation That Breaks the Pace Of Daily Life, Most Effective

By Ida Jean Kain

I MUST BE getting along. I used to think I had to be doing something every minute of a vacation or I wasn't getting my money's worth. It wouldn't have occurred to me not to get up early to go for a swim before breakfast. And now I sometimes start off with breakfast in bed.

I have come to realize that a vacation should provide—among other things—a good rest. We live twice as fast as we used to and it is harder for us to let down. A vacation is our one chance in the year to completely break the pace.

Exercise With Care

Certainly, desk workers need exercise. But when your muscles have been accustomed to sitting on the job five or six days out of every week, they are unequal to a sudden spurt of strenuous activity. At most resorts you have access to tennis, badminton, boating, riding, swimming, or maybe mountain climbing, all guaranteed to do you a world of good. But you had better be a lazy bones and ease into your athletics. There's no compulsion to prove how strong you are. You're not out to break records. You are supposed to enjoy yourself.

Unless you have been exposed to the sun regularly, don't try to get your coat of vacation tan in the first few days. The health authorities warn against going around in the hot sun with your head bare. After you have done your stint of exercise, rest in the shade. Don't sit in the sun to catch your breath—and, above all, don't catnap in it.

If your skin turns red or blisters but won't tan, sun is not for you. You should try to keep out of the direct rays. The same advice applies to the thin skinned blondes because they burn easily.

Watch the Sun

It may be that you are one of those people whose idea of a vacation is to average about 400 miles a day in your car. By all means see as much of America as you can, but don't drive yourself too hard. Except for the change of scenery, there is very little difference between sitting at your desk and sitting behind the wheel of your car. The stopovers that allow for mild activity will do a great deal more to put you into condition.

Whatever you do, have some fun. Consider yourself a little. Don't feel obligated to make a fourth at bridge when you'd so much rather be reading a good book. Say to yourself, "Now, for two weeks out of the year, I can do just as I please!"

Mary Haworth's Mail

Career Girl, 22, Good Looking and Well Dressed, Thought She 'Knew the Score' Until She Came Here, Where She Can't Get a Beau; What's the Trouble?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl of 22. I have been a Government stenographer for two years, am fairly good looking, dress well and, until lately, always thought I "knew the score." But after taking stock of my situation, I am beginning to wonder. My problem is simply this: I have no men friends.

That didn't bother me when I first came here, since I knew no one and was starting from scratch. I met a good many girls I liked, and with whom I played tennis, went to movies, football games and all the things girls do together. But after two years of paying my own way to everything, I am balking. Not that I mind the expense. I can easily afford what I want. It's just the principle of the thing. I am not man crazy, either. But I think it is perfectly natural for a girl my age to want to go about with men, occasionally.

You would think that at least one of these many girl friends could have introduced me to a brother or cousin or somebody of the stronger sex. But either they have a steady beau and none to spare, or, like me, they don't know any men. And these girls aren't "drips," by any means.

I think I have gone more than half way to meet nice men. Some girls I met at church invited me to several dances sponsored by their club—but due to an oversupply of girls at these functions, I helped decorate the wall at least half the evening. It is true I did have fun, even so; but only because I usually enjoy myself wherever I go. And the boys were nice to me; but none asked for my telephone number.

Also, I have gone to other dances, including some sponsored by the Y. W. C. A. And here is a brief outline of my luke-warm success with the men I met there: One youth took me to a movie the next evening following one of the dances. But I haven't seen him since, and that was a year ago. A second man turned out to be a "first-rate masher," although he held out hopes of some very interesting dates in the future. However, I figured it was smart to turn thumbs down on him, and I did. A third young man was unusually nice and he seemed to like me. But evidently he wasn't as interested as he seemed, because I never saw him again, either

So what's to do? My friends say I have a pleasant personality; but so have they, and about half of them are in the same boat. There must be something lacking on my part, but what it is, I can't for the life of me figure out. I try not to be over-eager, as I detest that in others. But I am friendly enough, and yet I can't get a beau. Surely there is hope and help for me, and I am hoping you can supply the lifeline.

JEAN.

A Social Hanger-On Attracts No Following

DEAR JEAN: The lack, I daresay, is not in your personality, but in your set-up. A girl who would surround herself with men needs, as much as anything—a cozy home background against which to play hostess, even though she dispenses only milk and crackers. Haven't you noticed that even the least magnetic creatures, when hospitably put forward by thoughtful parents who have money to spend on their daughter's friends, almost invariably win beaux and husbands?

In my opinion, the first thing any girl should do, when starting from scratch to make friends in a new environment, is to create for herself a social "frame" or "setting," and a social program. She must avoid the appearance of being a lost chip on the surface of the social wave; or, let's say, a wistful hanger-on to the coat tails of other people's lives.

Eligible bachelors and footloose young men are most attracted to girls who seem already to have solved the problem of amusing themselves. Men-without-women gather round the girl who draws them casually into a "home like" atmosphere of her creating; who warms and feeds and flatters them, and then shooes them out into the cold world again. In acknowledgment of the comfort they find at her hearthside, they take her to those football games and dances and movies that you yearn to see at some man's expense.

How does one create this "homelike" atmosphere on a bachelor girl's income, away from home? Smart girls do it by teaming up, in twos and threes, and etting an apartment,—where each is chaperone to the other,—and where they establish a custom of entertaining informally, in a lighthearted "come one, come all" spirit of hospitality. They may make a practice of keeping "open house" on Sunday afternoons; or of having a buffet supper party one night a week (perhaps on Friday evenings), followed by bridge or other games. Such parties become "institutions." They are "salons," on a small scale, and to be asked to them is a special favor (theoretically) and not a bid for attention.

Such a place should be furnished with a feeling for atmosphere. Almost all men instinctively give greater respect to a career girl on-her-own, if her immediate surroundings suggest that she has deep-thrusting ancestral roots, back home. Thus, a few odd pieces of old furniture (either from back home or the antique shop), some time-scarred bric-a-brac, some family portraits, or a wall paneled with photographs of friends known "since the beginning of time," all help create the desirable background.

When the stage is set, you have the ready made excuse for collecting men. When you go to parties, or wherever men are, and formally meet one who takes your fancy, or who seems to like you,—you have a basis from which to operate in promoting further acquaintance. You don't have to wait for him to ask you for a date,—or a series of dates. Supposing you have found something in common, conversationally, you may say: "We usually have people in for tea on Sunday afternoons. Would you care to come, around 5?" He will be intrigued by the "we,"—having taken you for a single girl,—and reassured by the plural, since it conveys the idea that you aren't at loose ends; that you aren't desperately making a play for him, but simply giving him a break of hospitality, if he cares to accept it.

Your problem, you see, isn't so much how to meet men, (for you do meet them), as it is how to get them interested in knowing you better. Already, I believe, you have muffed three promising chances, those three you mention, more because you lack a charming pied-a-terre than because you lack charm of personality. Had you been, all this time, in a position to put a best foot forward, in the role of hostess (and, therefore, as mistress of your own quiet world of happy activities), I daresay you could have run those three chances into an endless chain of attentions from agreeable young men. M. H.

Make Hooked Rugs at Home

HOOKED rugs are fascinating handiwork for your spare time. From castoff clothing you can make such lovely colorful designs, so easily!

A fit companion for your best furniture is an early American design. Squares of plain dark blue alternate with squares of oyster white in which petals blossom in a rainbow of hues—reds, greens, yellows, pinks—with a different rainbow for each square!

To make the design you need only a ruler to mark off the squares—and a teacup for shaping the petals. You can work right on the burlap foundation for your rug. The petals are made by forming overlapping circles with your cup.

Ink in your design, tack your burlap to a simple wooden frame and you're ready for hooking.

Prepare your material by cutting it into strips ½ inch wide.

Then hold a strip under the burlap with your left hand while you reach through with the hook in your right. Pull up a loop ¾ inch high, skip a few threads, pull up another loop, then another. Rapidly your rug grows!

Lovely crocheted and woven rugs are easy to make, too, with the directions in our 40-page booklet, NEW IDEAS FOR HANDMADE RUGS. Includes braided, tufted, Oriental pile type rugs—French knot, Navaho, jute rugs for summer.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, NEW IDEAS FOR HANDMADE RUGS, to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Aids to Vegetables

It is often just a little flavor quirk that puts across vegetables. Try some chopped mint in carrots, chives in creamed new potatoes, curry powder (go sparingly) in buttered cauliflower, and pimientos and onions in green beans.

Beauty Rules For Different Types Vary

Hollywood, Calif. —Because brunetts, blondes, redheads and brownnettes all have their individual beauty problems, no hard and fast rules can be given out to the geminine world at large. At least, that is the opinion of some of Hollywood's most attractive feminine stars.

Brenda Marshall feels that the girl with brunette hair may affect more extreme coiffures and gayer clothes than the blonde or redhead. But she must be careful in her makeup, tabooing rouges with a bluish cast and wearing powder dark enough for her skin. Oil hair treatments are a necessity because black locks must glisten and gleam. The dark-haired girl must also pluck stray eyebrows daily, whereas this may not show on a blonde.

Gladys George, believes that blondes must strike a medium between extreme sleekness and baby ringlets in their hair-dos. Blonde hair must also be shampooed more often than the others. The blonde complexion is more delicate than the brunette's or brownette's and requires more careful handling. Neither may a blonde wear too heavy a make-up, but she may wear an exotic one.

Joan Leslie advocates only loose coiffures for all red-headed girls so that the hair will reveal its flattering lights.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

On Pulling Up Stakes

I

To these four walls, last citadel against a devouring world,
I say farewell;
I say it to a loving friend from whom it strains my heart
To part forever;
A friend who shared my joys and griefs, my hopes and my despair,
Whose gracious presence enfolded me after the world's buffetings,
And with whom alone, I could be all myself, unmasked and free;
My room—as truest friend of all, I now salute you.

II

When we first met, you seemed so strange, aloof, unwelcoming,
A part of someone else;
Whose spirit brooded questioningly in walls and woodwork,
And hovered in the air;
But gradually we came to know and understand each other,
And to all my changing moods you gave companionship,
Protection, succor, peace, and a quiet listening
To even the unborn longings of my soul.

III

And I have grown to cherish you as only a woman can who realizes,
That she is singly blest,
By living in an age when members of her sex
At last have privacy;
And no more must pursue their little duties, even think their thoughts,
Under the watchful eyes of supervising "loved ones,"
But can close the door—and bolt it—and become in one small spot,
The landed owners of their bodies and their souls.

IV

Now as I go, I only ask that I shall leave behind a lingering presence,
Of what is best in me;
That all my weak and petty and ignoble thoughts and feelings,
May be as chaff blown far away;
And that somehow in all the nooks and crannies, in the encompassed ether
Of these four walls, my higher aspirations still may linger,
To give a welcome and a sustaining courage to the next wanderer,
Who seeks a sanctuary here.

Nazis Bomb Harbor Works At Alexandria

By the United Press

Berlin, July 20.—German planes raided Alexandria Friday night and scored bomb hits on objectives in both the east and west harbors of the British naval base, the official D. N. B. news agency reported today.

Bombs exploded on a coal wharf and among several warehouses and railroad installations, D. N. B. said.

The high command said German bombers raided military objectives in eastern England and the Midlands Saturday night, but it gave no details.

The Royal Air Force bombed a few towns in northwest Germany, principally Hanover, causing no military or industrial damage, the war communique said. It claimed night fighters shot down one British raider.

Ten British planes were reported downed Saturday, eight in an attempted attacks on the Channel coast and Norway, the high command said. D. N. B. gave the number as nine.

O'Daniel Invites All of Texas To Wedding of His Daughter

Molly O'Daniel and Jack D. Wrather, Jr.

Austin, Tex., July 20 (U.P.).—Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel today invited the entire State to attend the wedding of his pretty, black-haired daughter, Molly, to Jack D. Wrather, jr., at the Governor's Mansion on July 31.

O'Daniel said that, although the future of democratic living was not too bright, "We are proud to live where sons and daughters of the chief executive march side by side with all other sons and daughters."

The date of the wedding was announced by the Governor in his regular Sunday radio broadcast from the mansion today. He invited all of his listeners to attend, explaining that Molly would be wed in the mansion because Wrather, who is in the naval reserve, had persuaded his superior officers to permit him to marry earlier than next January.

O'Daniel, who plans to leave for Washington in early August as Senator, said that more than 3,000,000 visitors had come to the mansion since his first inauguration.

"The family looks forward to the wedding as the climax of two years and seven months of the happiest years of our lives," he said.

Merchant Slain; Employe Fells Thug

By the Associated Press

Petersburg, Va., July 20.—Ernest Beville, jr., was shot and killed today in a tussle with a holdup man who seized him as he left his College Avenue grocery store for the night with Saturday's receipts.

The 48-year-old merchant fell mortally wounded with a 22-calibre bullet in his abdomen while his handyman, Bobby Cole, elderly Negro who had called to drive Beville home for the night according to his usual custom gave chase and felled a man with a jack handle.

Cole held the wounded man, also a negro, until police arrived. He was slated as Thomas Gain on a charge of murder. Police headquarters said he admitted the holdup and that he said he fired only because Beville resisted.

The grocer left his shop about a half hour after midnight, Cole reported to officers, and walked toward the parked automobile in which he and Fred Washington, Negro, an employe of the grocery store, were waiting. As Cole opened the door for Beville and walked around to enter the car on the driver's side, a Negro came up and seized the grocer about the waist and sought to draw him into the shadow of a building. Cole said he grabbed the jack handle and started to his employer's assistance, but before he could reach the struggling pair the gun was discharged.

The alleged attacker started to flee with the wallet he had torn from Beville's pocket, Cole said, and as he hit him with the iron the wallet was tossed under a porch. The wallet, containing $172 in currency and about $233 in checks, was found by police.

The attack occurred in the heart of Petersburg's Negro business district where the store had been operated for some years.

Green Broadcasts Pledge of Future Aid to Norway

Copyright by New York Times

A pledge that the five million members of the American Federation of Labor will join with liberated Norway when the war ends to create together an enduring and just peace among the nations of the world, was broadcast yesterday over short wave to Norway from station WRUL at Boston by William Green, speaking as President of the American Federation of Labor.

Recalling that prior to the German invasion of Norway her people "enjoyed all the precious freedoms of a democratic state," President Green declared that the country is now "occupied by the forces of savagery," and that the same aggressor menaces the freedom of every democratic nation.

"Our people recognize more and more that the fellowship of man knows no boundaries," Green said, and promised that when the war ends "we shall join with you and help you in every way to translate economic progress into social justice throughout the world, so that the blessings of peace on earth and good will among men may become real and universal."

Gambling Big Business Again On Riviera

By Mel Most
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nice, France July 20.—The Riviera has kept enough of its playground spirit to remain the liveliest spot in France.

Gambling again is a big business. There are stage shows, and the bars remain open until midnight, although Nice is the only place where many offer music and performers. Full floor shows and public dancing are prohibited, however.

Nice, too, is the only place where the stores—Not permitted to shut down even though taking a loss—try to keep up window displays recalling the old times.

To replace the missing taxicabs, displaced by gasoline rationing, there are velo-taxis and moto-taxis, light two-seater trailers drawn by tandems or motorcycles. But these cannot be used in hilly towns like Monte Carlo.

Few Visitors

About 300 Americans still residing along the Riviera have expressed determination to remain, regardless of developments, while another 200 are uncertain or arranging to leave.

They are all that remains of the normal permanent colony of 1,500 Americans here and part of the large kernel of foreign residents who have stuck it out despite the war.

Where once about 60,000 transient visitors came yearly to the continent's greatest resort, now there are virtually none.

But refugees and a few French visitors kept the guest population considerably more than half that of former years until French from the north began to be repatriated and some of the forlegners were rounded up.

The picturesque closeness of the mountains and shore line leaves no room to grow anything on a large scale except flowers.

The central market of Nice is one of the few in France where lines form to buy vegetables. Labels on the packing crates of fruits and vegetables show they have come from North Africa.

Meat, poultry and dairy products are either rare or non-existent. There is a small quantity of fish of poor quality. Italian ham and cheese may be found.

Many Farewell Parties

Cities with a large native population like Nice, Antibes and Monte Carlo feel the lack of visitors less than Cannes and St. Raphael, while Juan Les Pins and Mentone, half-occupied by the Italians, virtually are deserted.

Most of the permanent American colony have become stay-at-homes, relying on the continual round of farewell parties for those leaving.

When the Vichy Government prohibited gambling after the fall of France, gaming continued only at the Monte Carlo Casino, in the independent principality of Monaco, which has managed to keep up appearances although it suffers from the same food shortages and the loss of its 40,000 annual visitors.

But Riviera authorities seem completely confident of the future and are laying out a vast program of scenic highways and other projects for the day when war is past.

American Wins Flying Cross In R.A.F. Bomber

London, July 20 (AP).—Sergt George Price Mitchell, 40, an R. A. F. rear gunner, who is an American though he was born in Paris, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for great courage during a British raid on Hamburg.

The official account said that Mitchell, who has relatives in Oakland, Calif., won his award on the return journey when: "an attack was made by a Messerschmitt 110. Despite intense concentration of cannon and machinegun fire from the attacker, Sergt. Mitchell withheld his fire until the enemy came within close range. He then fired a burst of 600 rounds at the aircraft, which broke away with its port engine aglow. It subsequently was confirmed that this aircraft was destroyed."

"Sergt. Mitchell displayed great courage and determination and set an example," said the official account.

Mitchell was an engineering instructor before enlisting in the R. A. F. He served as a pilot instructor before asking for active service.

July 4th Plan For Auto Cases To Be Revived

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, July 20.—W. Lee Elgin, State commissioner of motor vehicles, said today that within the next few weeks he would inaugurate for every weekend the plan adopted for the Fourth of July holiday whereby all traffic violators would be summoned to show why their operating licenses should not be revoked.

Due to the success of the Fourth of July plan, the commissioner said, he has received a suggestion from the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission that it will support him fully if he will put into effect the same plan for all weekends beginning each Friday at midnight and ending 48 hours later.

Elgin declared he was fully in accord with the commission's recommendation and could institute the plan within the next few weeks or sooner, if the additional volume of work resulting from such a program can be handled by his force.

Over 300 Maryland motorists who were convicted of violating the motor vehicle laws during the three-day Independence Day holiday, he announced, will receive notices within the next few days to appear at his office.

The plan was recommended by the traffic safety commission and adopted by Elgin to aid in reducing fatalities and accidents of less serious nature along the highways.

"From all indications," the commissioner said, "the campaign has had the desired effect, a substantial decrease in arrests being noted throughout the State."

"Much of the astonishment of the law enforcement bodies, over 40 per cent of the drivers arrested were first offenders," he added.

Cases are being prepared by the commissioner's staff, the first of which will be heard July 25 before W. Dana Rudy and Robert B. Garrett, operating license examiners for the commissioner.

West Africa Ready To Fight Again, French Are Told

Vichy, July 20 (U.P.)—Pierre Boisson, French governor general of stragic Dakar on the West African coast, told the French people in a radio address today that West Africa is ready to fight again if necessary "to prove its fidelity to France."

Speaking on the occasion of the start of empire week, Boisson recalled that Dakar was once attacked by British and "Free French" forces "but we were able and would again be able to defend our attachment to France."

"France's destiny and the destiny of Africa are closely linked and this solidarity is graven forever in African hearts," he said, speaking from Dakar. "To aid France in case of need—for that all of French West Africa is ready.

"Along with you Frenchmen of France we are keeping France's empire. Behind the marshal (Petain) we are working for France's recovery and are preparing our renovation. You can count on us to the limit.

Death Telegrams Denied to Japanese

Tokyo, July 20 (U.P.)—Messages bearing on birth, marriage and death today were placed in a "non-urgent" category by the ministry of communications which announced that beginning Friday no domestic telegrams bearing on these and other "nonessential" matters will be accepted except in special cases.

The bureau of telegraphs already is swamped with traffic, it was said, and hence all nonessential messages should be sent by mail.

THE NEW "BALALAIKA." Even though the Kremlin may fall, Russia will be going strong in the after dark picture in the Capital this fall. The Balalaika, a new Russian luxury spot described as a "theater-restaurant," will open in the Connecticut Apartments at Connecticut Avenue and M Street. There'll be dancing, a floor show and all the trimmings that go with caviar and champagne. Preliminary scouting indicates that roubles by the bucketful will be spent in decoration, and the entertainment will be both colorful and exotic. George Osmolaki, popular and able restaurant man and a real Russian in the bargain, will be the Balalaika's manager.

Herbert Sachs, owner of the Del Rio, which went up in flames some months ago, will soon step into the night spot picture again as proprietor of a new place to be located at 727 Fifteenth Street. We'll have to give you more details on this later, because Herbie's still away on his honeymoon.

THIS WEEK'S SHOWS. Shoreham Terrace. A triple holdover of last week's fine stars including Gautier's Steeplechase, dancers Maurice and Cordoba and the clowning stunt men, Kenny and Norris.

Lotus. "South Seas Fantasies" opens today. The eight "Fantasies" will do a hula, but of course, a Hungarian peasant dance and a rollicking polka. There'll also be songstress Joan Hope from Chicago's Chez Paree, magico Wesley Whitehouse and a dance team to replace the originally booked Theodore and Denesha, who met with a serious motor accident in Illinois.

Casino Royal. Joan and Bobby Rexer, clever brother and sister tap dancers, and Paul Rich, a sensational harmonica player, will head a new edition of "Broadway Brevities." There'll also be a group of sharp and bright new chorus numbers.

SNAP-SHOTTING PIANIST. Hi Hat's piano wizard, red-headed Sande Ross, has taken up photography seriously. He spends hours taking pictures of patrons in the Ambassador dining room, has also made candid camera studies of all his friends and their cats and dogs.

FASCINATING FACES. Mayflower Lounge. Bob Montgomery, late of the cinema and now of the Navy, with Senator "Happy" Chandler and De Witt Coffman of the Mayflower executive staff . . . Lounge Riviera. Barnee of the Shoreham waltzing at 3 o'clock in the morning with beauteous Talia whom you'll soon see on the Capitol Theater stage . . . Madrillon. Stella Amores, charming translator at the Veterans Bureau, being greeted enthusiastically by Peter Borras. Artist Brian Brown apparently immersed in creative thought over that important new job of interior decorator he's just been awarded . . . Mayfair. Those two handsome smoothies, Paul Kain of Glen Echo, and Mayfair's promotion manager, Jimmy Byrd, beaming above two of the most eye-catching cravats in this territory. Paul's neckwrapping was gray with flowery splashes of claret color and Jimmy's tie was of glistening red and maroon stripes.

Jimmy Nichols, talented singing saxophonist, formerly of the Lounge Riviera and who's just closed at Restaurant "823," will join Paul Kain's Glen Echo Orchestra this evening. He'll probably do his celeste specialties in a couple of weeks.

STAR CUSTOMERS of Burt's Trans-Lux are those radio notables whose pictures are displayed in its windows. If you step inside the chances are 10 to 1 that you'll see the original of at least one of the window displays and it's absolutely certain that several notable figures on the air waves will be perched at Burt's special "radio table."

THE KINDLY WEATHER MAN is bringing a record season of prosperity to the Starlight Roof. For this is the first season in a couple too many that Jupiter Pluvius has been considerate enough to turn on the rain early in the afternoon or so late at night that it makes no difference to Starlight gayeties. The lightly flashing dance music of Dick Wilson's band makes the picture perfect. And Lady Vine's pretty songs and cordial hostessing makes it all add up to the pluperfect.

Star Party-of-the-Week, and don't you forget it, will be the Rainbow Room's super-production "Sixth Anniversary Night" on Thursday eve. New York society's favorite maestro, Meyer Davis, will be master of ceremonies. A load of clever vaudeville acts, too. And at regular Rainbow Room prices. Imagine!

COLORFUL MUSICIANS' COSTUMES. Most dashing looking costumes in town are those worn by the Plymouth's Gypsies. Their red jackets are encrusted with golden buttons and we understand the Gypsies groan in unison when they think of the price they paid for those balloon-sleeved silk shirts . . . The Mexican costume worn by the King Cole Room's Vicente de la Garza is completely authentic down to his square-toed and slant-heeled boots. And the trousers are so tight that Vicente thinks it's the better part of valor not to sit down.

MASSA TOM O'DONNELL has been threatening for years to take O'Donnell's Farmhouse out of circulation as a countryside dining spot and to make it O'Donnell's Farmhouse literally by retiring to it as a country home. But what would he do if people drove up and demanded dinner?

HOLC Shift to N. Y. Will Be Temporary

A spokesman for the Home Owners Loan Corporation said yesterday that the transfer of the agency and its 1,150 employes to New York City will be temporary, that is, for the duration of the emergency. He said that they had been assured that the agency would be returned here to the building it now occupies when the emergency is over. As for how long the agency would remain in New York, the official wouldn't hazard a guess. He said that all arrangements for space in New York were being made on a temporary basis.

The next agency that will announce its exit from Washington is expected to be the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance of the Social Security Board. This bureau has more than 1,800 employes here and it has hired nearly 100 new employes within the past few weeks. It has been no secret that the bureau has been looking for space in Baltimore and Philadelphia and the employes have been informed of developments and told to be prepared to make a move.

Rural Electrification Administration is very proud of its new building on Connecticut Avenue, but it won't have it much longer if some people have their way. Several Agriculture Department officials are known to feel that REA and Farm Credit should be moved to either of the main department buildings and be made in fact members of the "Agriculture family." It's planned to make room for them by constructing several new buildings at Beltsville where some of the scientific agencies would be moved.

USHA Administrator Nathan Straus has confirmed the impartial board's decision that upheld the furlough of Bert Gross, president of the United Federal Workers local. Gross and the union are now expected to appeal to Federal Works Boss John Carmody . . . USHA will build Negro housing projects at Cabin John . . . Civil Service Commission has announced tests for blueprint and photostat operators . . . Census Bureau is getting letters from lonely single men who are asking to be given the names of single women.

Harold L. Ickes is taking seriously his job of conserving the Nation's oil supply to his personal discomfort. He walks and uses his official auto to take groups of Interior officials to the Capitol and other places around the city instead of having his subordinates use their cars or cabs . . . Federal agencies are promoting the sales of defense bonds but Commerce has the most interesting sales plan. Each payday 18 employes in the Division of Commercial and Economic Information contribute $1.94 each to Constance Ely. A $25 defense bond goes to the winner but each coniributor will eventually get a bond.

The President is expected to sign an executive order this week that will permit employes affected by the Ramspeck Act to be promoted to better jobs within their agencies without losing their chance for Civil Service status under the act. It's a fact that benefits of the act can't now be extended to promoted employes. In the first place the jobs to which the employes can be promoted must be filled by persons with Civil Service status under another executive order. Further, the affected employes aren't permitted to change status for six months prior to January 1, 1942, the date the jobs will be covered under the merit system. The order will wipe away the red tape.

A merger of the power agencies is again being talked of in New Deal circles. Interior Secretary Ickes is said to covet Tennessee Valley Authority, REA, and the Federal Power Commission. The secretary had similar ideas two years ago but Senator George Norris, the father of TVA, nipped them. Legislation would be required to swing the merger . . . Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy has been conferring frequently with the President. Can it be that Murphy will resign to take a more active job in the Administration?

Cooling, But Inconvenient

Wichita, Kans., July 20 (A.P.).—It was 90 in the shade so OPM Director William S. Knudsen took his cooling off with a laugh.

A waiter accidentally poured a glass of iced coffee down Knudsen's back during a luncheon in his honor. The OPM chief was in Wichita inspecting defense industries.

Overwhelming

San Diego, Calif., July 20 (A.P.).—Carroll and Nora Belle Raborn and John Y. Kester petitioned the city to annex the tract of land where their homes are situated. At 6 a. m. Saturday they opened the polls, marked their own ballots and waited for 7 p. m.—the official closing time for the polls. The result: three votes in favor of annexation.

2 Women Die, 2 Men Hurt on Route No. 1; Cyclist Also Victim

In the Washington area, a score of injuries were reported in highway accidents.

The Fredericksburg accident took the lives of Mrs. Minnie Scherr, 49, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Bessie Levin, 53, of Brooklyn. Mrs. Levin's husband, Sam, 47, and his brother-in-law, Isaac Levin, 57, also of Baltimore, were injured in the crash.

Isaac Levin was to have married Mrs. Scherr in Washington this week, he told State police. The four were en route to Richmond to visit friends.

At Mount Sidney, Richard Nelson Driver, 21, of Waynesboro, Va., was killed when his motorcycle collided with an auto.

Roscoe Thomas, 12, Negro, of 489 School Street Southwest, was seriously injured in the 300 block F Street Southwest, when his bicycle collided with Mrs. Gladys Middleton, 30, of 1117 Third Street Southwest, according to police. He was treated at Providence Hospital for a head injury, Mrs. Middleton, for a bruised knee. Mary Lott, 42, Negro, of 1243 Maryland Avenue Northeast was severly injured in an accident in Hyattsville. She was treated for face and internal injuries at Casualty Hospital.

Horace Hancock, 9, of 4008 North Twentieth Road, Arlington, Va., was injured seriously yesterday when thrown from his bicycle on North Johnson Street near Washington Boulevard.

According to Arlington County Police, the boy's bicycle struck a stone and hurled him to the paving. He was taken to his home by a passing woman motorist and later removed to Georgetown Hospital, where he was treated for a fractured skull.

Branchville Accident

James M. Leary, 24, of Gastonia, N. C., was treated for injuries to the right ankle at Casualty Hospital, where he was brought from an accident at Branchville, Md.

Margaret Roberts, 23, of 49 Anacostia Road Northeast was treated at Casualty Hospital for a fractured left shoulder she suffered in an accident on Central Avenue. Nancy Langley, 42, 615 Raleigh Street Southeast, was treated for lacerations to her scalp after falling from an automobile in Waldorf, Md., according to police.

Dianna Dudley, 20, of the Raleigh Hotel, received minor injuries when the car in which she rode ran off Route 50 about 20 miles east of Winchester, Va. Two persons were injured when involved in an accident in Hillside, Md. They are Winnie Oden, 25, and Raymond F. Oden, 27, of Arlington, Va.

Three women from Philadelphia were injured when their car hit a light pole in front of 3008 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast. Taken to Casualty Hospital were Grace Turner, 40, Negro, treated for a fractured left leg and lacerations; Goldie Carter, 38, Negro, internal injuries, and Anna Holmes, 42 Negro, sprained ankle.

An accident at Thirty-eighth Street and Alabama Avenue Southeast sent an 8-month-old infant to Casualty Hospital suffering from a lacerated left foot. He is Robert Jones, Suitland, Md. Joseph A. Kulka, 24, of Bolling Field, a passenger in the other car, was treated at the Bolling Field Hospital for a nose injury.

4 Registrants Win Appeals For Deferment

Four Washingtonians were granted reclassifications last week after they had asked to be removed from a 1-A status, the Selective Service Board of Appeals announced last night.

The men are: Norman A. Brasseur, 24, FBI clerk; John G. Wilson, jr., 26, engineering estimator; Pasquale F. Lentini, 22, plaster estimator, and Bernard R. Alexander, 25, Panama Canal clerk.

Three others had their appeals for reclassification postponed for 30 days pending legislation to defer men over 28 years of age. They are Louis C. Winstead, 31, General Accounting Office auditor; George F. Steptoe, 30, Internal Revenue Department file clerk, and Cecil P. Kueven, 33, printing company employe.

Conscientious objectors whose appeals were referred to the United States attorney are Raymond M. Brannon, 28, radio serviceman, and Chester I. Pope, 33, chemist in the Department of Commerce.

Appeals of three men were refused. However, the board voted to reconsider one of the cases.

Returned to their local boards for additional information were the cases of John F. Thompson, 22, stenographer, and Leonard L. Fischman, 22, Census Bureau employe.

Choir to Sing At Sylvan Theater

The program will be under the direction of Miss Wilhelmina B. Patterson, assisted by James B. Jones, jr. Arrangements for the appearance of the Shiloh Choir were made by T. J. Anderson, assistant director of the Community Center and Playgrounds Department.

Red Cross Seeks Volunteer Workers In Alexandria

With a record quota of war relief supplies having been accepted for delivery by January 1, 1942, the Alexandria chapter of the American Red Cross has appealed for additional volunteer workers to assist in the production of garments at its Lee Camp Hall sewing rooms. Additional workers, who are willing to call for supplies and complete the work at their homes, are sought.

The new quota, which has just been assigned by national headquarters, is three times as large as any previous quota accepted by the chapter, according to Mrs. Laurence J. Martin, production chairman. Volunteers are needed for sewing and cutting garments, while a number of assistants in other production fields also will be necessary if the quota is to be filled by the specified date.

Youth Supports Defense Program, Survey Shows

American youth supports the national defense program overwhelmingly, according to results of a survey made public yesterday by Charles W. Taussig, chairman of the National Advisory Committee of the National Youth Administration.

Nine out of ten of thousands of young people interviewed in schools, churches, NYA projects, and social and sports organizations are willing to do their bit to help and two-thirds of them have definite ideas about how they can help.

More than 70 per cent of the young people interviewed made concrete suggestions for the improvement of the defense program, many of which point out the need for greater community defense activity.

Catholic U. Group Hears Special Mass

Summer Students Take Part in Devotional Rites; Procession Held

Catholic University summer-school students participated in a special devotion to Our Lady of Mount Carmel yesterday at the university. The occasion was the Sunday nearest the feast of Our Lady of Mount Carmel, which took place on July 16.

Ceremonies included a colorful procession of priests and laymen from McMahon Hall to the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, where at 11 a. m. solemn high mass was said. The Very Rev. George Klasinski performed the ceremony assisted by the Rev. Francis Alphonsus, deacon and Brother Joachin Smet, sub-deacon. The Rev. Thomas Kilduff, prior of the Discalced Carmelites, preached the sermon.

This ceremony is distinguished by the four priests, one Augustinian, one Dominican, one Franciscan and one Carmelite, who lead the procession bearing on their shoulders a statue of Our Lady of Mount Carmel. Outside the Vatican walls in Rome this same ceremony also took place yesterday.

Thomas' Kin Urges Passive War on Nazis

"It may be better for Britain to win the war than Germany, but which ever side wins, the result will be a loss to civil liberties and democracy."

With these words, Dr. Evan W. Thomas, brother of the Socialist leader, Norman Thomas, emphasized his exposition of the strict pacifist and conscientious objector's attitude toward the war before a meeting at Palisades Park last night, sponsored by the local chapter of the "Keep America Out of War Congress."

One hundred people clustered in a circle within one of the park's picnic groves to hear the speaker urge a policy of nonviolent resistance.

It is a belief in war and an acceptance of violence as a legimate means of achieving a desired end that causes war, Dr. Thomas said, but through war, democracy and freedom is lost. Instead of preparing to defeat Hitler by force, he asserted, democratic leaders should have followed the leadership of real conscientious objectors and taught passive resistance.

"Instead of war," he said, "we must win by learning not to cooperate with Hitler. And I admit that it will take generations to build a new democracy in this way."

"I would hate to see Britian lay down her arms and submit, but I think there is a better way of winning—the positive, pacifist way. I don't believe in submitting to Hitler. If I weren't a pacifist I wouldn't be an isolationist."

Speaking after Eugene Wilson, assistant administrator of the Patapsco camp for conscientious objectors, had briefly described the activity of the camp, Dr. Thomas concluded: "This position doesn't originate with me. You'll find most of it in the New Testament."

Houses Are Donated To the Collection Of Defense Metal

SIDNEY LUST

Sidney Lust, operator of a chain of theaters in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, yesterday donated his theaters for aluminum matinees Thursday at 2 p. m.

Lust informed Alfred D. Noyes, Montgomery County aluminum committee chairman, that he would stage special matinees at his Bethesda Theater on Wisconsin Avenue near East-West Highway, and the Milo Theater in Rockville, across from the county courthouse, Thursday afternoon.

He also informed P. E. Clark, Prince Georges County chairman, that his theaters in that county would stage similar matinees for the benefit of the aluminum campaign. Affected are the Hyattsville Theater, the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier and the Marlboro at Upper Marlboro.

Admission to the shows will be a piece of aluminum. Any person bringing a piece of aluminum will be admitted free to the show.

Lust is bearing the entire expense of operating the shows as his contribution to the aluminum campaign.

Chairman Noyes announced last night that all is in readiness for the Montgomery County campaign. Collection centers have been announced for the county. Noyes announced that any person who does not know the location of the aluminum collection center in his section can call the nearest Montgomery County Police, where lists of the collection centers will be posted today. The list was carried in the Sunday morning edition of The Post.

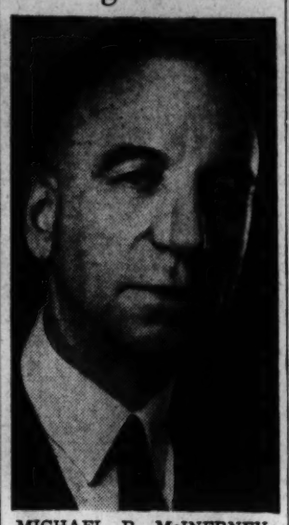
Chief Special Investigator Dies



MICHAEL P. McINERNEY, chief special investigator for the Veterans Administration, who died yesterday

McInerney, Noted Sleuth, Dies at 68

Michael P. McInerney, one of America's famed old-time detectives, and chief special investigator of the Veterans' Administration, is dead.

Mr. McInerney, who was 68, was stricken yesterday morning in the Medical Building, 1801 I Street Northwest, while on his way to see his doctor. He was removed to Doctors Hospital, next door, where he died.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. Wednesday at St. Paul's Church, Fifteenth and V Streets Northwest. Burial will be in Virginia City, Nev.

Mr. McInerney was born in Virginia City, scene of the fabulous Comstock lode. He spent most of his life in the West, coming to Washington in 1914 as a special officer at the Capitol. He gained Nation-wide fame as the captor of Pat Crowe, one-time train robber and kidnaper, in Butte, Mont., in 1905.

Mr. McInerney had trailed Crowe for five years for the $25,000 kidnaping of Edward J. Cudahy, jr., 13-year-old packing firm heir. Crowe later turned evangelist and started out on a campaign preaching that crime doesn't pay. He died in a New York hospital three years ago. Until the end, Crowe insisted that he gave himself up.

But, Mr. McInerney, who took great pleasure in talking about that case and many others, said that Crowe was taken just as Dillinger was caught—that a woman turned him in. Mr. McInerney, after talking with the woman, went to an address given and put handcuffs on the "most wanted man in America."

Mr. McInerney is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Catherine McInerney, 2015 Fifteenth Street Northwest; two sons, Wilbert McInerney, former assistant United States attorney, 4212 River Road Northwest, and Lieut. John McInerney, United States Navy, 5508 Johnson Avenue, Bethesda, Md.

Another resolution called on Secretary Harold Ickes to appoint ten colored members of the Park Police.

A supplemental appropriation of $5,000,000 was asked "to assure payment this summer of $60 more in wages for each Government employe."

Cell Is Place Where Eyes Can't Be Raised To Questioners

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

They may place Guy Oden in the chair, but the pain of the last moments would be slight compared to the agony of these days.

He stood last night, as he will stand today, thin hands clutching the iron bars of his cage in the First Precinct jail, a rope of mouse-colored hair twisting over his downcast eyes.

This is what they know about Guy Oden:

He is a 19-year-old movie usher who lived at 618 Sixth Street Northeast. He went with a pretty 15-year-old girl named Ellen Cannon who lived at 458 G Street Southwest. Saturday he went in search of her at her sister's house and when he found her he shot her, sighting the bullets into her body through a backporch screen.

That's what the police books say, so it must be true.

But standing there in the cage, trying to think, trying to recall, it seems there must be more.

You're naked in the cage. They left you your clothes and they bring you food and water and cigarettes and newspapers, but you're naked, stripped of the ability to raise your eyes that makes you a man.

The reporters come, shambling through the clanging gate to the cells, some of them embarrassed by the questions they must ask.

"Hi, Guy," they say. "Have a cigarette, Guy. They treatin' you all right down here, Guy?"

They lounge against the iron bars and they try to soften you up for the hard questions they must ask.

What they want you to say is "I loved her, but we could never marry . . ." or "All of a sudden I went crazy and I didn't know what I was doing . . ." or "There was another guy . . ."

You want to say you didn't do it. It was another guy who looked just like you, but you went off somewhere for a rest while he took your body and did it. And now it's done and they say you must have done it.

They probe you with questions and you mutter about quitting school after junior high and working at small jobs—soda fountains, neighborhood movies. Your mother and father separated and they think maybe that's part of the story.

They're crazy. There isn't any beginning, there's just the end on a hot summer day when that other guy—not you— fired those shots.

So you stand and wait for the inquest at the morgue Tuesday morning. That's where they say she is. At the morgue. Not a bad place to be, the way you feel.

Negro Group Opposes Police 'Muscle' Squad

The local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People yesterday condemned "any proposal to establish a so-called strong arm squad for the purpose of intimidation and abuse" of District residents and visitors.

The resolution, together with several others, was adopted, the association said, as a result of suggestions offered at the recent House police investigation here.

Condemn Arrogance

Police who express racial prejudice and whose dealings with Negroes have been marked "by arrogance, verbal abuse and physical violence" were characterized as unfit for public service in a second resolution.

Also condemned were proposals to destroy through terrorism any organization which seeks to extend and preserve citizenship rights Stringent vagrancy laws proposed were scored as interference with free movement of American citizens.

The organization indorsed requests for increased District public welfare appropriations, pointing out that better schools and hospitals, health and recreation facilities, adequate relief and increased employment opportunities serve to remove the causes of crime.

Mere Policing Not Enough

"These factors must be recognized," the resolution stated. "No police department, however well financed, efficient, and well organized, can hope to deal effectively with crime by police methods alone."

Appreciation and commendation was expressed for those members of the Police Department "who have discharged their duties with dignity and appropriate regard for their responsibilties and the rights of citizens."

Nadenbousch Named

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 20.—Judge D. H. Rodgers has appointed J. Roy Nadenbousch, local banker and insurance man, jury commissioner to succeed B. D. Myers for a term of four years from July 15.

Inquest in Slaying Is Salled for Tomorrow

A coroner's inquest into the slaying of Ellen Reid Cannon will be held at District morgue at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Meantime, funeral arrangements have been completed for the pretty honor graduate. Services will take place at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Zuhorst Funeral Home, 301 East Capitol Street. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

An autopsy revealed that the girl died of a bullet wound in her chest. Two other bullets, from a .25 caliber automatic, entered the girl's body according to Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner.

Ring Body Sanctions Turner's Fights Tonight

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Feller Handles Own Financial Affairs

Cleveland, July 20.—For five years now, Bob Feller has probably been America's No. 1 boy. In his teens he was a big league baseball star and at 22 he has fame, fortune and a man's place in the world. The things for which every lad is wistful belong to Feller.

POVICH

Feller does his own business now. Time was when he leaned heavily on the older judgment of C. C. Slapnicka, general manager of the Cleveland club, to manage his monetary affairs, but Feller now directs his own finances. They run to an income as high as $50,000 a year.

There isn't much doubt that Feller is the highest salaried player in baseball, despite Buck Newsom's claims to the contrary. Feller's salary for 1941 is more than the $30,000 figure that was vaguely announced by the Cleveland club. Actually it is $34,500, but that isn't all. Shrewd young Mr. Feller has a bonus arrangement with the Indians based on home attendance of the Cleveland club. He is capitalizing on his drawing power.

That bonus arrangement with the Indians is verbal. If the Indians pass a certain figure at the gate, they'll give Feller a few more thousand. There is an abiding faith between Feller and the Cleveland front office. They trust each other. It's been that way ever since 1937 when the Indians almost lost Feller through contract irregularities. Feller's declaration to Judge Landis at that time, that he preferred to stay with the Indians, put the Cleveland club forever under obligations to him. Feller might have pocketed $150,000 from the Red Sox as a free agent. The evidence is that he didn't lose all of that sum. The Indians made him a sizable cash gift for his loyalty.

Pitcher Has Other Channels of Income

The boy's income isn't limited strictly to his baseball salary. Last month a personal appearance on Eddie Cantor's Coast-to-Coast radio show fetched him a thousand dollars. There are Bob Feller bicycles and Bob Feller candy bars on the market which net him royalties, and there are Bob Feller baseball gloves and shirts that up his income. His contract with Wheaties nets him $1,500 a year for the use of his name on broadcasts. The journeyman players are usually paid a mere $100 for the same indorsement.

He's still an open-faced kid. When he draws a razor across his cheeks, it's mostly for a sort of manly satisfaction rather than any great necessity for a shave. He wants to grow up a little faster than he has, and to be one of the boys. He's got the American boy's weakness for fast cars and, happily, the money to buy them. He has a record of five speeding arrests and most of his cars have been Buick super-chargers.

He delights in taking his family from their Iowa farm home to the big cities he visits and show them that he's a man of the world, just like any other kid would. But he's built them a $35,000 home on their farm and actually he doesn't have any big-shot pretensions. He likes to introduce his Mom and Pop and sister to all the ball players. His great good pal from home is the young, 27-year-old minister who goes on the Indians' road trips with him sometimes.

There hasn't been any great heart interest or romance in Feller's life as yet despite the goo-goo eyes of girls around the circuit for the handsome young Robert. He isn't as shy about girls as he used to be, though, and the great fear of the Cleveland ownership is that he may fall for the wrong gal. However, that is not exactly a great fear. General Manager Slapnicka doesn't think it will happen. He was saying so the other day.

"Robert will marry the right girl all right. He can't help it, because everything else he does is right."

Feller Doesn't Drink or Smoke

He doesn't smoke, and he doesn't drink anything stronger than cokes. The Christian Temperance Society would love him. Chesterfield cigarettes off him $2,000 for an indorsement, but he said no. He doesn't care that much about dough and he's just a well-principled lad. Conservative estimates are that he has passed up $10,000 for indorsements he wouldn't go for.

Bob cusses a little bit these days. He never used to and he does it self-consciously but he's feeling his ground. As we were saying, he wants to be one of the boys. He tries to act just a bit imperious with waiters, and the like, sometimes, but he doesn't really mean to be tough. He merely wants to grow up fast. He goes for bright sports clothes and with his physique and good features is something of a clothes horse—until he starts to walk, when his plowed-field gait betrays him completely as an ex-farm boy.

He likes to be pally with sports writers and makes it a point to thank 'em when they write nice things about him. The last thing he wants to be with the folks he meets is a big shot, although he loves to have people talk about him and ask for his autograph. When he leaves people, he wants 'em to say, "There's a nice guy." They always do. The most remarkable thing about Feller aside from his matchless pitching ability is the sense of balance he has retained amid the idolatry lavished on him. The kid is completely unspoiled.

Yanks Beat Tigers, 12-6, In 17 Innings

Bombers Blast Six Runs Home in 17th; DiMaggio, 3 Others Clout Home Runs

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 20.—The New York Yankees keep rolling right along, even if it takes them 17 innings.

In the longest game played in the major leagues this year, the league leaders exploded with six runs on two homers, three doubles and a single in the seventeenth to take a 12-to-6 decision today from the Detroit Tigers. It gave the Yanks a sweep of the three-game series and boosted their lead over the Cleveland Indians to seven games.

Fireman Al Benton was the victim of the Yankees' big uprising, being nicked for a homer by Charley Keller at the outset, a single by Phil Rizzuto and doubles by Johnny Sturm and Red Rolfe before Johnny Gorsica relieved him. Gorsica promptly pitched a home-run ball to Tom Henrich, who scored behind Rolfe. Joe DiMaggio followed with a double that wasn't needed.

Bengals Miss Chance

New York counted three runs in the third and added another in the fifth on DiMaggio's twenty-first homer. The Tigers, however, who had counted a run in the second on doubles by Charley Gehringer and Birdie Tebbets, came right back to tie it up in their half on Pinky Higgins' fifth homer with two aboard.

That ended the scoring until the ninth, when each team pushed over two runs to send the contest into extra innings.

The Tigers loaded the sacks on three successive walks in their half of the seventeenth, but couldn't score.

Two American and two National League games have gone 16 innings this year.

Scribe Suggests Putting DiMag's Record on Back

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 20.—In an open letter to Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees, J. E. Wray, sports editor of the Post-Dispatch, suggested today that Joe DiMaggio's uniform number be changed to 56.

That could be done by adding a 6 to DiMaggio's present number, 5, Wray wrote, and would be a daily reminder of the outfielder's major league record of hitting in 56 straight games.

Wray pointed out the No. 56 was earned in other ways. During the streak, DiMaggio drove in 56 runs and scored 56 times himself.

Racer Is Killed In Dayton Crash

Dayton, Ohio, July 20 (AP).—Tommy Legge, 26, of Seattle, Wash., was killed today on the half-mile dirt speedway when his racing car went out of control during a warm-up. He was to have driven in a benefit race for Everett Saylor, of Dayton, hurt at the Indianapolis Memorial Day auto racing program. Legge's wife, June saw the crash.

Archie Finds Reception at Home Plate . . . but He's Safe

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

George Archie, the Nats' third baseman who had doubled in the fourth inning of the first game of yesterday's doubleheader with Cleveland, got caught at the plate at what looked like an easy out. But Archie crashed into Catcher Hemsley and spilled him forcing the catcher to drop the ball and Archie was safe. The umpire is Summers. Washington won the first game, 8-4, but lost the nightcap, 5-1

Promoter, Commission 'Make Up'

Turner Files Another Application; DeChard And Carilli Bout Tops Griffith Stadium Card

By Tony Neri.

The much-discussed controversy between the District Boxing Commission and Joe Turner, local promoter, came to a peaceful end—temporarily, at least—yesterday afternoon when the commission, represented by Claude W. Owen, sanctioned Turner's promotion of the DeChard-Carilli fight program tonight at Griffith Stadium.

At a meeting held at the home of Owen, chairman of the commission, and attended by Turner, Frank Buckley, the promoter's attorney, and Joseph Danzansky, an associate of Buckley, differences between the commission and Turner were ironed out.

Thomas P. Morgan, jr., and Ernest W. Brown, the other members of the commisison, were not present. The pair had been contacted on the telephone by Owen and were in accord with the proceedings.

Turner applied for another permit and posted an additional $10 fee, the price of the permit. In a signed application Turner agreed to pay the commission "an amount of money equivalent to the 10 per cent of the total gross receipts, less Federal taxes."

Application Filed

The notice of application filed by Turner reads:

Gentlemen:

"I have today filed with your commission an application for a boxing contest to be held at Griffith Stadium on Monday night, July 21, 1941, and agree if such permit is granted I will pay the Boxing Commission an amount of money equivalent to the 10 per cent of the total gross receipts, less Federal taxes."

Signed, JOE TURNER.

The climax to the Turner-Commission squabble, which had been brewing for a week or more, came Saturday night when the commission in a prepared statement revoked Joe Turner's boxing permit, forbidding him to stage the scheduled fight at Griffith Stadium.

This action was taken by the commission after Turner had notified the body that he would not pay the 10 per cent "tax" imposed by the commission on his promotions.

Turner announced that "appropriate legal action" would be taken if the show was not allowed to go on.

In yesterday's meeting they agreed to work together to make tonight's show a success, which is in form of a testimonial to Turner, honoring him for his 35 years in the wrestling and boxing game.

Muddle Ends

Owen announced that he had no intentions to harm the promotion of the show. And Turner asserted that he wasn't trying to put the commission out of business. So, another chapter has passed in the District's boxing muddle.

Meanwhile Jimmy DeChard, Washington's good-looking heavyweight who meets Joe Carilli, of Hartford, Conn., in the main bout,

Macks Earn Even Break With Chisox

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 20.—The Chicago White Sox defeated Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics today, 2 to 1, in the first half of a doubleheader, but the visitors gained an even break with a 4 to 1 decision in the 13-inning nightcap.

Lee Ross, former Philadelphia pitcher, battled three hurlers for an edge after the score was tied at 1-all in the second game. Pete Suder opened the thirteenth for the A's with a single and was promptly forced out by Tom Ferrick.

Jimmy Webb erred on Al Brancato's grounder, putting both runners in scoring position. Wally Moses was intentionally walked and then Benny McCoy drove in the winning run with a deep fly. Bob Johnson doubled home two more useless tallies.

Ted Lyons tossed the six-hit first game victory, giving the 40-year-old star his ninth decision of the season and the 242nd of his career. Sam Chapman's home run robbed him of a shutout.

Indians and Nats Divide Double Bill

Sundra Hurls 7-Hit Ball in 8-4 Opener; Errors Aid Cleveland in 5-1 Nightcap

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, July 20.—The shocking prospect of winning two games in a single afternoon sort of stupefied the Nats late today and they averted a double victory over the Indians. After winning the first game, 8 to 4, the Nats got an even break with the Indians, losing the second game, 5 to 1.

There was grave danger that the Nats would win both games, as late as the seventh inning of the finale. The score was tied at 1-1 and Vernon Kennedy was pitching 4-hit ball against the Cleveland club. The Nats had the bases full with none out, and it seemed they might win the ball game, but they didn't stir up a run out of the situation.

And then to make their second game a complete flop, the Nats' defense cracked wide open when the Indians came to bat in the seventh. The Indians scored two runs against Kennedy without making a hit. George Archie muffed a ground ball and matters then became downright comic, with two Cleveland runs scoring on a bunt and the bunter, Gene Desautels, barely being thrown out at the plate after scurrying around the bases on the little tap that started all the trouble.

The Nats packed three errors into that seventh inning. Archie muffed a grounder, Mickey Vernon threw Desautel's bunt over Archie's head and when George Case finally retrieved the ball, he threw it wild past second base. It was brutal treatment of Kennedy.

Sundra Allows 7 Hits

The double bill drew 20,815 fans to Cleveland's big Municipal Stadium and they were a depressed crowd when big Steve Sundra, getting sustained hitting support, held the Indians to seven hits. The Nats knocked Al Milnar out of the box with a five-run rally in the fifth, during which Jimmy Bloodworth hit his second homer in two days—an enormous blast over Centerfielder Rosenthal's head to the running track beyond.

In that second game, Kennedy was a hardly-treated victim of his pals in his duel with Jim Bagby. In a sudden attack of inspiration, Manager Bucky Harris promoted Kennedy from the doghouse to a starting assignment and it was a clever seven-hit game that the lean right-hander turned in while the Nats were making eight hits off Bagby.

Only one of the five runs allowed by Kennedy were earned. A third-inning fumble by Archie accounted for the Indians' first run, a fumble by Ken Keltner gave the Nats a run in the second inning and the game rocked along at 1-1 until the seventh.

In that seventh, Vernon led off with a single to right and Archie moved him to third with a long double to left. In this crisis, Bagby was ordered to pass Jake Early, and

Browns Take Double Bill From Bosox

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 20.—The Browns blended baseball's important ingredients—hitting and pitching—today to capture a twin bill from third-place Boston and stretch their winning streak to four straight, longest of the season.

The double kill gave the St. Louisans a sweep of the series as they also won a doubleheader yesterday.

Starting pitchers finished both games for the Browns, Bob Muncrief, lanky speedball ace, scoring a 10 to 0 shutout in the second. Almost as good was John Niggeling's 6 to 3 triumph in the opener. The veteran knuckleball hurler shut out the Red Sox until the ninth inning when the injured Ted Williams, pinchhitting for Lamar Newsome, pelted a home run with two on base.

Simultaneously, the Brownie artillery blasted out 28 hits, 15 coming in the first game. Biggest gun was graceful George McQuinn, who homered twice in the first contest and once in the nightcap to make it

Hall Captures Langhorne Auto Race

By the Associated Press

Langhorne, Pa., July 20.—Taking the lead a tthe start and averaging nearly 69 miles an hour Roy Hall, 22, of Atlanta, Ga., won the 200-mile stock car auto race at the Langhorne speedway today. Seven accidents that sent several drivers to a hospital thrilled a crowd of 41,965.

Driving a 1939 Ford coupe, Hall covered the 200 miles in 2 hours, 55 minutes and 25.46 seconds, although proceeding under the yellow caution flag for 20 laps around the mile oval.

Rodney Lommis, of Warren, Pa., finished second, a mile in the rear, in a 1941 Mercury. Walt Keiper, of Trenton, N. J., was third; Lloyd Seay, Alanta, fourth; Harold Brokhoff, Pottsville, Pa., fifth; Harold Collier, Uniontown, Pa., sixth; and Jack O'Brien, of Pittsburgh, seventh.

A three-car collision was the most serious of the seven accidents. Jim Sonebraker, of Hyattsville, Md., suffered a broken jaw and Doc Ashbaugh, Miamiburg, Ohio, a wrenched right arm.

Wilbur McLaughlin, Uniontown, Pa.; Larry Bloomer, Collegeville, Pa.; Larry Darner, Zanesville, Ohio; Felix Wilkes, Ringoes, N. J.; Dave Randolph, Long Island City; and Buster Warke, Walnutport, Pa.; all suffered minor cuts and bruises in the other mishaps.

Braves Are Victims As Redbirds Sweep Sunday Bill, 4-2, 7-3

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 20.—The League-leading Brooklyn Dodgers split a double-header with the Pittsburgh Pirates today while the second-place Cardinals were taking both ends of their twin bill to close the gap between the two clubs to a game and a half in the topsy-turvey National League pennant chase.

After taking today's first game, 5-1, behind the peerless pinch-pitching of Curt Davis, Brooklyn came a cropper in the night cap against tobacco-chewing John Lanning, who curve-balled the Dodgers and Whitlow Wyatt into a 5-1 defeat.

Davis, coming in for Fred Fitzsimmons in the fourth inning of the opener after the veteran suffered an injury to his right forearm on Bob Elliott's line drive, pitched hitless ball until the ninth, when the Buss strung together two hits and one run. A pinch homer by Lou Riggs with one on in the seventh and a base-clearing triple by Dolph Camilli in the eighth gave the Dodgers all their scores and Davis his fifth straight win.

Lanning Stops Flock

Lanning was too much for Brooklyn in the aftermath. He didn't allow a run for eight innings but lost his shutout in the final frame as Joe Medwick blasted his twelfth homer of the season.

Wyatt walked in the first Pirate run with the bases loaded in the second stanza. Arkie Vaughan hit a seventh-inning homer and Elbie Fletcher's double and Maurice Van Robay's single scored the third Pirate marker in the eighth. Three singles and Camilli's error put away the game in the ninth as Pittsburgh scored twice to close out the day's festivities and hand Wyatt his third straight loss.

In the second inning of the after piece, Manager Frankie Frisch was bounced by Umpire George Barr for strenuously protesting a called strike on Bob Elliott. When Elliott struck out a moment later, Arbiter

Higbe Confined To Hospital

Ben Hogan Wins $5,000 Open Golf

Winner Posts a 274, 10 Under Par; Wood Second With a 276

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 20.—Little Ben Hogan, in a furious final round battle which saw him out punch national open champion Craig Wood, captured the $5,000 Chicago open golf championship today with a 72-hole total of 274 strokes, 10 under par for the Elmhurst Country Club course.

Four strokes ahead of Wood at the 54-hole point, Hogan saw his margin steadily whittled as the open titleholder turned on the heat. Then the little professional from Hershey, Pa., placing in the money in his fifty-first straight tournament, slugged his way out of this "corner"

Wood played today like the champion he is, carding two brilliant rounds of 67-67, each four under par for a 72-hole total of 276. But it wasn't good enough to withstand the iron-nerved play of the 140-pound Hogan, who fired a pair of fine 69's into the day's 36-hole duel to the finish.

A huge gallery of more than 6,000 fans—sending roars across the fairways at each birdie clicked off by the two golfers—swung first to Hogan, then back to Wood on the last few holes. Each fired a one-under-par 34 going out on the final round, Wood making the 63-hole turn with Nugent also announced that Catcher Walter Millies had been granted his outright release and Second Baseman Harry Marnie optioned to Springfield on a 24-hour recall basis.

Marnie came to the Phils late last year from Ottawa in the Canadian-American League.

Diffenbaugh Has 70 But Kenwood Loses; Bannockburn Bows

160 Players in Two Classes in Manor, Congressional Play

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Interclub team matches highlighted the District's golfing calendar yesterday, Indian Spring defeating Kenwood, 23½ to 18½, Argyle almost doubling the score on Bannockburn, 23½ to 12½, while Woodmont traveled to Baltimore and dropped a 24-12 decision to Suburban.

East Potomac took both men and women golfers to Richmond for the clash with the Glenwood public course lineup and came away on the short end of a 16-8 score.

INDIAN SPRING

Visiting Pro George Diffenbaugh and J. E. Hutchinson, jr., started the Kenwood team off to a three-point lead by whitewashing Mel Shorey and Dr. A. T. Utz, Diffenbaugh playing the course in two under par 70, but the Four Corners Club had too much strength all down the line-up.

Indian Spring members also opened qualifying for the club championship with Eddie Ault shading par figures by a stroke with a 71 to take over the medalist spot, temporarily, at least. Qualifying will continue next weekend.

Pres Burrows and Volney Burnett posted 76s, the former's round including four consecutive threes, an eagle on the 12th, birdie on the 13th, par on the 14th and birdie on the 15th.

Claude Rippy did not compete in either the club tourney or team match but he turned in the hottest round of the day, a 68 which helped him and Charley Malone to an easy victory over Pro Leo Walper and Dick Melvin. Rippy's score was best of the foursome by 10 strokes.

Indian Spring, 23½; Kenwood, 18½

WOODMONT

Woodmont golfers ran into trouble in the first foursome in the form of a six-under par 64 by Pro Ralph Beach, and went on to lose their annual inter-city match with Suburban over the Baltimore course, 24 to 12.

Beach holed a half-dozen 20-footers but he needed them for Gene Larkin, the Woodmont professional, played the layout in 67 strokes, holing all putts, and still lost, three down. Beach had nines of 31 and 33 and Larkin 33 and 34.

The Woodmont members played good golf, losing a majority of the points only 1 up on each nine.

Beach and Suburban Club President Phil Katz won three points from Larkin and Leopold V. Freudberg, chairman of the golf committee at Woodmont. Katz and Freudberg had a side match with the professionals, getting a stroke on all the long holes, but they ran into a beat ball 80. Beach played the

The Washington Post trophies will be at stake today as 160 members of the District Women's Golf Association, 76 Class A players at Manor and 84 Class B contestants at Congressional, gather for the annual 18-hole handicap tournaments.

The permanent Post trophies will go to the winner's club for a year while low net and low gross winners in each class will receive silver plates and bowls, respectively, for permanent possession. Additional net prizes in each class will be contributed by the association.

This is only the second year for the Class B section of the tournament and the only name on the trophy is that of Mrs. Ingman Harr, Washington Golf and Country Club, who won last year at Kenwood with a 99-29, 70.

Cup Introduced in 1933

The Post Cup was first introduced on the women's golf schedule in 1933 when Elizabeth Harris was president of the association. From 1933 until 1939 it was played as a week-long match play tournament, with a flight of 32 qualifying on Monday and one match a day following through the finals on Saturday.

As the tournament schedule of the association continued to grow Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president in 1939, asked The Post to reduce the tournament to a one-day 18-hole medal play affair to relieve congestion on the card. This was done and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, of Chevy Chase, won it the first time as a medal play affair.

Last year, as entries in The Post Cup and other tournaments neared the 200 mark, too many for a single day's play on one course, The Post Cup event was divided into a two-class affair and The Post donated a permanent trophy for the Class B golfers, the original trophy remaining in play for the Class A contestants.

One Former Champion Entered

The only former champion entered today is Mrs. Arnold McNitt, of Congressional, who won it in 1938, the last year of match play competition, held at Manor Country Club. Mrs. C. P. Medley, the defending champion from Indian Spring, has not been active in golf this year and will not defend the title won at Woodmont.

Both Class A and Class B competition will get under way today at 9 o'clock from both the first and tenth tees, with Wiffy Cox and Warner Gray supervising the starting at Congressional nad Al Treder and Karl Kuster at Manor Club. All players will have started by 10:05.

The Post Cup is the first major tournament to be played in midsummer in many years, an innovation this year of Mrs. Walter L. Weible, the active president of the District Women's Golf Association from Kenwood. Heretofore, the summer months were left free from tournaments but to avoid spring and fall congestion Mrs. Weible asked the card be spread over the entire season, and it was adopted by her committee.

The battle for the low gross prize in class A looms as the best of the season with the big names of local women's golf entered, including Mrs. W. R. Stokes, Mrs. Myron Davy, Mrs. Betty Meckley, Mrs. Leo Walper, Mrs. L. G. Pray, Mrs. T. F. Neblett and Mrs. T. O. Brandon.

Mrs. Weible and a representative of The Post will present the prizes in class A and Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, first vice president, will handle the class B presentation ceremonies.

Rosenfield, Rubin Hurl as Senate And Standard Meet

Veteran Abe Rosenfield, Senate Beer mainstay, and Benny Rubin, crack Standard Linen hurler, are slated to hook up in what looms as a torrid pitching duel tonight at Ballston Stadium as their respective teams clash in the nightcap of a Merchant's Softball League doubleheader at 9 p. m.

Senate and Standard are currently in possession of first and second places, respectively, in the league standings. Whereas the Beermen have already clinched their position, however, Standard still has to battle with Plaza Wine and Liquor for the runner-up position and unless they win tonight, the Linemen face dispossession.

I. B. M. is also within striking position of second place and can greatly enhance its chances by virtue of a victory over Manhattan tonight.

Indianhead Nine Tops Reliance, 4-0

The Indianhead nine topped the Reliance Life Insurance team, 4-0, at Indianhead, Md., yesterday afternoon as pitcher Dolly Millar held the losers to 2 hits. No Reliance batter was able to get as far as third base as Heise led the attack for the winners with 2 hits out of 3 trips to the plate.

Parker Takes New York Clay Court Crown

FRANK PARKER

Jackie Kramer Bows To Californian, Master Of Foe Throughout

By the Associated Press

New York, July 20.—In what was little more than a dress rehearsal for the important grass tournaments to come, Frankie Parker, of Altadena, Calif., closed the clay court season today by winning the New York State championship.

Frankie's new forehand, his old reliable backhand and all-around court generalship were very much in evidence as he wore down Jackie Kramer, of Los Angeles, 6—3, 2—6, 6—0, in the semifinal round and Ladislav Hecht, of New York, 6—1, 6—3, in the title round.

Hecht had gained the final round earlier in the day with a 5—7, 6—4, 6—1 triumph over young Ted Olewine, of Santa Monica, Calif., the National Intercollegiate Doubles champion.

Aside from the set he dropped to Kramer, Frankie was in trouble only once. Jackie opened their match with an assortment of soft stuff which caught Parker off guard and earned the National Doubles champion the first three games. Frankie recovered quickly, however, and won the next six games for the set.

Parker, whose victory today was his eighth in nine tournaments this year and his sixth on clay, quickly established his superiority over Hecht in his second engagement and spent most of the time brushing up his strokes for the Sea Bright (N. J.) Invitation Tournament tomorrow, which opens the major league grass circuit.

Kramer gained partial revenge on Parker for the singles setback when he and Ted Schroeder, of Glendale, Calif., won their fifth straight doubles championship with a 6—0, 3—6, 6—3, 6—4 decision over Parker and Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City.

Grays Bow To Eagles Here, 5 to 3

"Bizz" Mackey's Newark Eagles annexed the first game of a doubleheader yesterday at Griffith Stadium, defeating Cumberland Posey's Homestead Grays, 5-3, before 1,600.

The Grays were leading in the second game which was called after three and a half innings. Rain had delayed the opener for an hour.

The Grays went hitless for four innings in the initial clash, the Eagles' two-run lead looming as formidable. They began to connect with "Trooper" Hill's slants in the fifth, however, and in the sixth tied the count when Harris singled, Leonard doubled, and Carlisle drove them home.

In the seventh the Eagles went ahead very definitely, Mathews and Christopher singling, and Davis sending them over the plate with a crashing double to center.

In the second game the crowd was electrified by Judd Wilson's sensational catch of Irvin's hot liner toward left which was labeled for a triple. Judd went to his left lightning fast, stuck out his gloved hand, and leaped into the air, to cut off what might have been the Eagle shortstop's fifth hit of the day.

Home On the Range

Redskins' Slingin' Sammy Baugh, Star of Hollywood Horse Opera, Remains Loyal to His First Love—Football

'He's a Natural," Says Director as Sammy Turns Actor; He's Popular, Too

By Robert Myers

Associated Press Sports Writer

Hollywood, July 20.—The director said he threw up his hands and started swearing when the studio announced that a football player was to be his next star. "Sammy Baugh? Baugh?—bah! I never heard of him," Jack English, the director, said he stormed. "Why, oh why, don't they give me an actor. Even a seal. At least I could train one of them. But a football player—"

Baugh was sitting on the ground chewing a straw while English was talking. He grinned ear to ear. A pleasant, friendly grin.

"Boy, I don't blame him," he said simply, and crawling to his feet, he walked over to join the crew on his picture, a serial labeled "King of the Texas Rangers."

English resumed:

"Believe me, I didn't lose any time writing Baugh's part. I knew he couldn't handle dialogue, and I figured he'd probably have to have a side saddle.

"But I'll tell you what—the guy is a natural." He lowered his voice. "Yes, a natural. Of course, he hasn't learned yet how to give the right punch to a line, but he's the fastest bird I ever handled. No prima donna athlete, that fellow. He's got it in the head. He's a real find, mark what I say."

The real find, at the moment, was having a little difficulty. While one of the grips engaged Sammy's attention another from behind poured a bucket of sand down the Baugh boot tops. Playful fellows, those men on a picture crew, and a tough lot in a way—but they don't kid with anyone they don't like.

"This," said Sammy later, emptying his boots, "is the silliest business I ever got in. Remember how we used to play cowboy and Indian? Well, that's all this is, except we get paid for doin' it.

"Look at that," he directed. They were shooting a scene where Duncan Renaldo gets tied up by border hoodlums. "They're makin' out like they're villians, pointin' them guns at Renaldo, shucks, this is fun. Just like playin' cowboy and Indian.

What will Sammy's pals in the hard bitten professional football world say about Baugh, the movie hero?

"Whew! I can see it comin' already. Some big guy is gonna knock me down and then give me his hand and say, 'Mister Barrymore, can't I assist you to your feet?' And on the next play he'll knock me down again."

Washington Redskin fans, and Sammy's admirers in football, need have no fears about his grid career. It's his life, football. Movie-starring is just a pleasant and profitable interlude.

Baugh thinks Washington will have a strong team, with great material coming from the colleges this year.

He was well acquainted with vague reports that some of the Redskins let down in taking that memorable 73-0 whacking from the Chicago Bears for the championship last fall because, supposedly, they didn't like George Marshall, owner of the team.

"Don't believe a word of that," Baugh exclaimed. "Every man out there was playing for his salary, for his bread and butter. He's not going to risk his livelihood whether he likes Marshall or not; or whether Marshall likes him or not. It was just one of those things."

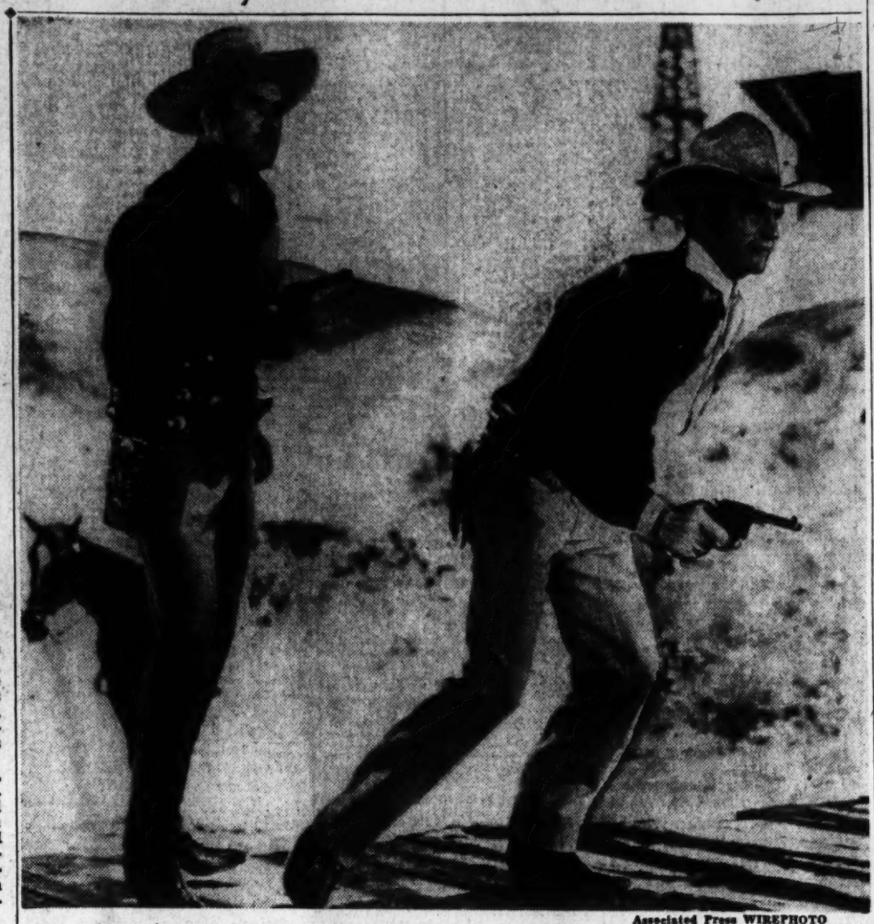
Six-foot Sammy, who stands as straight as he lives—he doesn't drink or smoke—fits into these cowboy boots as if they were made for him, which they were, and makes an odd Hollywood cowboy because he has a bona fide drawl. His manly features range somewhere between handsome and homely. Texas-born, and now a ranch owner, he's a marvelous horseman.

His football fame is certainly well established, but for those in the same boat with Jack English, it might be noted that Slin' Sammy is the greatest pass-artist in the game. He brought national collegiate honors to his alma mater, Texas Christian University at Fort Worth, and became even greater in professional football.

One of the best stories on Baugh, which gives an insight to his modesty, happened at the close of his college career. Honored at a banquet in Houston, Baugh heard himself eulogized by Sports Expert Lloyd Gregory and many others as one of the greatest of great All-America players.

But it so happened that also present was Alan Gould, then sports editor of the Associated Press, and Gould had omitted Baugh from his All-America team that year. Which prompted Sammy to lean over during the speech-making and whisper:

"Mr. Gould, it looks like you and me are the only ones here who don't think I was an All-American this year."



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

This movie acting is just like playing "cowboy and Indians," says Sammy Baugh (right), the only difference being that you profit financially. The Washington Redskins' star is called a "natural" by Director Jack English, but he still prefers football. Baugh's sidekick in this bit of Hollywood drama is Actor Duncan Renaldo

Angott Meets Ray Robinson In N.B.A. Bout

New York, July 20.—Two of the National Boxing Association's world champions and a couple of the country's ranking heavyweights headline this week's busy National boxing program.

Feature attraction finds the N. B. A. lightweight king, Sammy Angott of Louisville and Washington, Pa., meeting Ray Robinson, the young New York negro knockout specialist, in a ten-round overweight affair at Philadelphia Monday, which may lead to a settlement of the long dispute over just where the balance of power lies in the 135-pound division. Angott already has been signed to meet the New York-sanctioned champion Lew Jenkins here in the early fall, but if Robinson should whip him decisievly Monday, the chances are Promoter Mike Jacobs will make a switch.

At Chicago, Tony Zale, the N.B.A. middleweight ruler takes on Ossie Harris, Pittsburgh pounder, in a ten-rounder Wednesday. This also is a nontitle tussle.

Heavyweight headliners on the week's card are Bob Pastor, the former college boy from New York, and Red Burman, the Baltimore belter with the cement chin. Pastor and Turkey Thompson tangle at Los Angeles Wednesday in a ten-round rematch of one of the year's most sensational fights. The last time they met, there were close to a dozen knockdowns before Pastor won out.

Burman, whose last major engagement was with Joe Louis in February, tops former football Coach Chick Meehan's second promotion at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, by facing Melio Bettina, former light-heavyweight champion, in a ten-rounder Tuesday. On the same card, Lee Savold faces Solly Krieger, one-time N. B. A. middleweight champion.

Asheville Wins

Ashville, N. C., July 20 (AP).—A pair of well-pitched games by Milt Lowery and Bob Doyle, coupled with Dick Sisler's three-run homer in the opener, gave the Tourists a double victory over Winston-Salem here today to sweep the series. The scores were 3-1, 5-1.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

Views Behind the News:

New York, July 20.—"Yanks average 21,847 customers per game."—that's what the pennant-bound New Yorkers have drawn, per contest, over the past 12 games, and the figure soared even higher today at Detroit. What does that make of the plans to sell the club? The persons concerned don't want to talk about it, but it is safe to assume that there will be no sale for some time to come. In fact the club may actually work itself out of its financial pit, if the executors of the Ruppert estate can come to some agreement with Uncle Sam—by spreading the late Jake Ruppert's inheritance tax payments over a period of several years.

CONSIDINE

Jim Farley's group, which includes millionaires such as Bill Danforth, former Gov. Cox of Ohio, Jesse Jones and a few others, have a little over a million dollars in cash ready for the down payment on the Yanks. Farley could lay his hands on it in 24 hours. The deal was inches from being closed, when the Yanks sank to fifth place just after the start of the season. But Joe DiMaggio's incredible streak, which shot a quart of adrenalin in the club's veins, has changed the outlook. The executors of the estate, knowing just how much cash they need to pay Uncle Sam, grow less anxious to unload the Yanks every time they win a game.

Heirs Haven't Received Anything

We understand that that is not quite true, however, of the three ladies to whom Jake left the bulk of the ball club. They have realized nothing out of the team, though it is listed as a multi-million dollar asset. The situation seems to be that they want to see some tangible return on their fabulous legacy, whereas the men who do their thinking for them, or their voting for them, are determined not to sell the Yankees for what Farley's associates call "a bargain" so long as the Yanks are packing them in better than any other club in baseball. They feel that the Yanks might pay off the estate's tax indebtedness out of the "gate."

In the meantime Uncle Sam strokes his whiskers and bides his time. He wants a big chunk of cash from the Ruppert estate, and is characteristically opposed to waiting for it. It was this characteristic which prompted the executors to try to sell the ball club, because it seemed to be the most negotiable part of the Ruppert brewery and real estate empire. Now, thanks to one man, the club is red hot. And the offering price of the Farley group, which looked very nice to the Ruppert executors, and downright luscious to the girls who own the ball club, grows stingier looking every time DiMag biffs one and leads the club to a well-attended victory.

Still . . . Uncle Sam isn't the waiting kind. Which makes the race behind the Yankees pennant race as interesting as each Yankee contest in itself.

It Looks Like Wishful Thinking

"Burman-Bettina fight 'to meet Louis' "—so announced Chick Meehan, the former football coach who has moved into the New York fight picture. Just how he is going to get Louis to meet the winner of Tuesday night's Red Burman-Melio Bettina match remains to be seen. For Louis has to get permission from Mike Jacobs even to shave.

Meehan has pledged himself to do everything opposite from the way Jacobs does it, on his way to the top of the fight promotion heap. But by matching Burman and Bettina "the winner to fight for the championship" he seems to be following that wonderful nonsense that has long been established in the ring, to wit, rewarding obvious failures with title shot promises. The memory of Burman lying in front of us face down with his neck resting on bottom ring-rope, his wounds making a neat, flat, red pancake on the white ring canvas, and the memory of Louis standing in a neutral corner watching the prostrate warrior, is still too fresh in our mind. So is the memory of what Billy Conn did to Bettina when he took the lightheavyweight championship away from him.

Now, let me see. Louis knocks out Burman. Louis knocks out Conn, who beat Bettina. Burman and Bettina fight "to fight Louis." That makes me the welterweight champion of Peru.

Barney Welsh Faces Battle in Open Tennis

By the Associated Press

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 20.—If the size and quality of the entry list for the West Virginia Open Tennis Tournament starting tomorow is any criterion, Barney Welsh's perennial possession of the trophy definitely is in jeopardy.

The Rockville, Md., attorney has held the title for four years. He must stake his retention of it next week against such contenders as Bobby Leitch, city champion of Richmond, Va.; Harris Everett, Jacksonville, Fla., 1940 intercollegiate Middle Atlantic singles titlist and Delos (Deacon) Parsons, of Huntington, State closed champion.

Alex Querry, jr., Sewanee, Tenn., former University of North Carolina star; Coach Ed Blickle, of Ohio State University, and Stacey Hill of Dartmouth College represent some of the higher caliber of competition.

Approximately 40 players had registered today for the week-long competition, and sponsors predicted fully that many more would participate.

In 1939, it was Marta Barnett, of Miami, Fla., who defeated Miss Wolfe.

Jimmy Evert Takes Junior Tennis Title

By the Associated Press

New York, N. Y., July 20.—Warming up by winning the last five games of an interrupted semifinal match, Jimmy Evert, of Chicago, the national junior indoor champion, went on to take the Eastern Junior title today with a 6—1, 4—6, 6—1, 6—1 triumph over Blair Hawley, of New York.

Evert first had to overcome Irvin Dorfman, of New York, with whom he had split two semifinal sets before yesterday's rain. Play began today with a 1—1 deadlock in the third set, but Evert quickly pulled away from the local interscholastic champion and won, 6—1, 4—6, 6—1.

Hawley, a cagy player with dynamite in his forehand, had only his caginess left after Evert got rolling in the first set. The 17-year old Midwesterner converted Hawley's fiercest drives into annoying little trap shots that fell dead over the net with hardly enough strength in them to bounce more than once.

Hinkle Threatens To Quit Packers, Desires More Pay

By the Associated Press

Neenah, Wis., July 20.—Clarke Hinkle, veteran Green Bay Packer fullback, said today that he would retire from professional football unless the Packers paid him a bigger salary this year.

Hinkle declined to state how much he was asking but he commented he had been "playing for peanuts in previous years."

He is employed with the Kimberly-Clark Paper Corporation here. Now 30 years old, Hinkle holds the Packers' all-time scoring record with 334 points, scored in nine years of playing.

Handicap Division Without Standout Performer This Year

Last Horse To Fade Out Is Mioland

Challedon, Fenelon, Eight-Thirty Drop Out of Picture; Arcaro Suspended

By Sid Feder
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, July 20.—If your milkman can spare the front end of his delivery equipment for a short spell, you might put in a claim on behalf of the horse for the handicap championship of the year right now.

What with Mioland's defeat by Big Pebble in yesterday's Hollywood Gold Cup and the embarrassing efforts of late of such "good things" as Eight-Thirty, Fenelon and Challedon, there isn't a galloper in the lot who can say "I'm the boss," so your milkman's oat burner might do just as well as any of 'em. There hasn't been a year like it since Paul Revere's big hoss broke the record for the Boston run.

Geting right down to cases, it's not altogether impossible for Ben Jones to run Whirlaway through the rest of his 3-year-old engagements and then start him in a few gallops against older horses in the fall.

Arcaro Is Grounded

That is, Whirly might do if he doesn't miss Eddie Arcaro too much in next Saturday's Arlington Classic. The way things look now, the Kentucky Italian who steered Warren Wright's little fellow to his triple-crown triumph in the Derby, Preakness and Belmont may be sitting that one out. He ran afoul the Empire City stewards for a foul in yesterday's second race and they suspended him. The Jockey Club may decide to keep him grounded until too late to hop back on the bandwagon.

In that case, it would be up to game little Wendell Eads again, and, while Whirly probably could win this one pulling an Army tank, you can't forget that he was strictly a stick of dynamite with a wet fuse until Arcaro came along to teach him traffic regulations at the turns.

Others Have Failed

The end of Mioland's bid for the year's handicap honors didn't leave him exclusive in that department. Last spring there was Eight-Thirty. He was supposed to be the head man. But he was hurt and retired. Then "Sunny Jim" Fitzimmons sharpened Fenelon up and sent him out. He stayed about as sharp as the eighth shave on a razer blade. There was talk that Challedon was highballing on the road back, but this turned out the same.

Big Pebble, himself, might put in a bid for honors, since he won the Widener at Hialeah last winter and followed it up by collecting $62,475 more for Ed Moore, the Wyoming rancher, yesterday. But some of the fellows who whipped him in between those two outings might consider that boasting.

Regatta Set August 9, 10 At Solomon's

By the Associated Press

Solomons, Md., July 20.—Extensive plans are under way to match many of the country's outstanding racers in the Solomons Island Yacht Club regatta August 9.

Sailboats, outboard motor craft and the larger inboard speedboats will compete in approximately 30 events sanctioned by the American Power Boat Association.

Outboard races are scheduled for Saturday afternoon over a triangular course in the inner harbor while sail races will be held outside on the Patuxent River. Inboard races will be staged Sunday off the island front around a two-buoy course.

The club's new commodore is Dr. R. V. Truitt, director of the Chesapeake Biological Survey. Other officers are James O. Lore, vice commodore; John H. Taylor, rear commodore; Howard Tongue, secretary, and Halvor H. Hallen, treasurer.

The August regatta is one of 42 sanctioned for 1941 by the A. P. B. A.

race. There will be no limit to the number of horses allowed to start in jumping events. However, ten will be the limit field in all flat races.

Director of Wagering McConnell has increased both the selling and cashing departments. This means that there will be no crowding at any time. This has been made possible by enlarging the grandstand and erecting a new clubhouse. The latter is the finest of its kind gracing any American track of less than a mile.

Supt. John Wells has grown a hedge around the steeplechase course, which is located in the centerfield. This will enable the riders to keep their horses on the course, as well as keep spectators from crowding on the track when a race is in progress.

Several new roads are being built into the track. Walks are being laid from various parking areas, and when all work is completed, this plant will be tops of its kind. With the enlarged grandstand and new clubhouse it will be possible to care for crowds of 12,000 in comfort.

The minimum purse throughout the meeting will be $500. Numerous $1,000 races will be programmed, both for flat, as well as jumping races. This track was the first of the State's five of less than a mile to announce a minimum $500 purse.

Bill Bennings

Racing fans in this section are getting a two-day vacation. The Bel ir track opens on Wednesday, so today and tomorrow turf followers will get a chance to catch up on their knitting, sleep and correspondence. The Post's Bill Bennings will use the interval to get his pants patched and his shoes half-soled. If you are still interested in his comment and selections they will be resumed in The Post Wednesday morning.

Belair Race Meet Opens On Wednesday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Belair, Md., July 20.—General Manager G. Ray Bryson of the Harford County Fair Association, which will stage it's 10-day race meeting, July 23 to August 2 inclusive; today announced that he had set the post time at 2 p. m.

Bryson decided on the 2 p. m. starting time following a canvas of turfites residing in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Ohio, which States furnish the bulk of patronage thoughout the racing here.

Bryson also announced that Director of Wagering Walter McConnell would offer daily double wagering on the first and second races. Wagering on the "double" will close promptly at 1:45 p. m., so that the official prices can be posted immediately after the first race is run.

Seven flat races and a steeplechase will be programmed daily by Race Secretary Edward J. Brennan. The steeplechase will be run as the third

Phils Outhit Reds, but Lose Double-Header

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 20.—The last place Phillies made only three runs on 21 hits today while Cincinnati got ten runs on 15 safeties to take both ends of a double-header from the Phils, 7 to 1 and 3 to 2.

Big Paul Derringer was nicked for 13 blows in the opener, but ended a five-game losing streak by being tight in the pinches. The Phils left 12 runners stranded. They escaped a shutout when Joe Marty scored in the eighth on Ben Warren's single. Meantime the Reds, led by Mike McCormick who got four for four, piled up a big lead off Ike Pearson to win easily. One of McCormick's hits was a homer.

Southpaw Lee Grissom hurled four-hit ball for Phils in the nightcap but suffered his ninth defeat. Ernie Koy made two of the Reds' hits, a double and a single, that drove in two Cincinnati runs. In the seventh a wild throw by Ben Warren put Eddie Joost on third, from where he scored the winning run on Mike McCormick's fly. Except for a homer by Johnny Rizzo, the Phils were helpless before Jim Turner until the ninth. Then Danny Litwhiler's double, Warren's single and a stolen base by Stan Benjamin, who ran for Warren, brought Joe Beggs to Turner's rescue. He got Merrill May on a pop fly and fanned Harry Marnie to end the game.

Bloodworth was up with the bases full.

The Nats got nothing out of the inning. Bloodworth grounded to Bagby who threw to the plate, forcing Vernon, and his throw was relayed to first by Desautels to double up Bloodworth.

Then came the Nat's horrible fielding exhibition in the same inning. Kennedy threw his glove high in the air when Umpire Joe Rue called two close pitches to Oscar Grimes balls, and Grimes drew a walk with none out. Mack hit a grounder to Archie and when that young man was through manhandling the ball, both runners were safe.

Desautels bunted down the first base line, and you should have seen what happened. Vernon scooped up the ball and threw it 6 feet over Archie's head in an attempt for a force play. George Case finally got the ball in left field, and for no reason at all threw it to second base. The throw went through Bloodworth's legs and skipped all the way to the right field boxes. Eventually Right Fielder Buddy Lewis who had taken no part in the proceedings to this point, found the ball in his territory and slung it home. By that time two runs were across the plate and Desautels, who had bunted in the first place, was now nearing the plate. A swell tag by Early on Lewis' throw finally got Desautels out. In his anger, Kennedy threw a fast ball to Rosenthal and he knocked it out of the lot for the third run of the inning.

In that first game the Nats didn't dally with big Milnar. They got two runs in the seventh inning after Milnar butched Vernon's bunt. Archie tripled to deep left center and Evans scored Archie with a single through the box.

The Nats upped their lead to 3-0 in the fourth when Archie's hit fell behind second for a pop double. Bloodworth's out moved him to third and the Nats got a gift run when Hemsley dropped a throw to the plate from Heath on Evans' short fly, after tagging Archie out.

Into the fifth inning the Nats packed five runs after Boudreau butched a grounder off Case's bat. Cramer singled and Lewis drew a walk.

Travis got one run home with a grounder to Grimes and Vernon drove in two more with a lengthy triple to right-center. With two out, Bloodworth walloped an amazing drive over Rosenthal's head and beat it out for a homer that scored the fourth and fifth runs of the inning.

Sundra was breezing along in the comfort of that 8-1 lead when all of a sudden he ran into a squall in the Indians' fifth. With two on and two out, Keltner hit a terrific homer against the facing of the upper deck in left field and took a 3-run chunk out of Sundra's lead.

That blow woke the big right-hander out of his complacency and he went to work superbly thereafter, holding the Indians to one hit and no runs in the last four innings.

The Nats wound up their road trip with 11 defeats and 5 victories and sole possession of the cellar.

Victor Scott Wins Honors In Boat Race

By the Associated Press

North East, Md., July 20.—Victor Scott, Forest Hills, N. Y., carried off top honors in the outboard motor boat races on North East River today before a squall forced curtailment of the North East Yacht Club's twelfth annual regatta.

Scott, a veteran driver, captured the Class C and F events for both amateurs and professionals over an unofficial course.

Fred Jacoby, jr., North Bergen, N. J., who yesterday amassed a total of 3,100 points in outboard races at the Havre de Grace regatta, had to be content with victory in the Class B race and a runner-up position in the Class A event.

Jacoby won the first heat in Class A but his boat developed trouble in the final heat.

The Class A, B, C, D and E inboard runabout events were run off together before white caps on the rain-swept river forced cancellation of the remaining inboard races.

All the races were run over unofficial courses and contestants in most events were not timed.

George Schrafft, Newton, Mass., piloted his speedy Chrissie IV to victory in the 225-cubic inch A. P. B. A. event. Jack O. Cooper, 70-year-old driver from Kansas City, Mo., and Henry Davis, jr., Granogue, Del., were victorious in the 91-cubic inch and 135-cubic inch races, respectively, for the larger hydroplanes.

All even coming to the seventeenth after not more than one hole had separated the teams all the way, Danny holed a 15-footer for a birdie three and his partner clinched the match on the par three enghteenth by laying his tee shot two feet from the pin. He missed the putt, but that didn't matter.

Danny's 73 was the lowest score of the foursome and he and Zarracina had a best-ball 71. Bogart and Allan Burton combined for a best ball of par 72.

Eddie Bean reported one of the few eagle deuces ever scored on the par-four ninth hole, the Midget Speedway general manager knocking a four-iron shot into the cup after a fairway drive.

MANOR

Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Butler won low net in Manor's Mixed Scotch foursome with a 47-44, 91-24, 67 while low gross went to Mrs. J. T. Powell and W. A. Covert, who required 46 strokes on the first nine but came back in 38 for an 84.

took things easy at a nearby beach.

DeChard has been installed the betting favorite at 6 to 5.

The winner of tonight's fight will probably qualify for a spot on the Lou Nova-Joe Louis card in September in New York's Polo Grounds.

Both Nova and Louis have been seeking Carilli as a sparmate when they begin training for their title fight.

Two wrestling matches have been added to the card. The mat fans will be treated to an Abie Coleman-Angelo Leone match and Maurice LaChappelle vs. Jim Austeri. The matches will follow the boxing program.

There has been one change in the preliminaries. Freddie Crabal will sub for Frankie Wills against Joey Spangler, of Richmond, in an eight-rounder.

The card will open with a four-round bout pitting Jackie Cranford against Stoney Jackson. Young Foster will face Adam Taylor in a six and Oscar Wright, local lightweight, meets Justo Jiminez, of Mexico, in an eight.

a 243 total and Hogan a 239 aggregate.

Then Wood reeled off a par four, birdie three and a birdie four on the next three holes, picking up three shots as Hogan took two par fours and a bogie six.

The Hershey professional then "bore down," getting two par fours, a birdie at No. 15 on an 8-foot putt, a par three on the sixteenth, a birdie three on another 8-foot putt at No. 17 and finishing with a par four at the final green. Wood's card showed five pars and a birdie on the final six holes.

Hogan, whose record of being in the money for a fifty-first straight tourney is one of the games' great achievements, had rounds of 66 and 70 Friday and Saturday against Wood's 73 and 69. By taking down first money of $1,200 Hogan increased his long money-earning lead this season over golf's big-time competitive field.

Third place went to Dick Metz, of Oak Park, Ill., who won this event a year ago with 278, then a record score. Metz, working on opening rounds of 72-67, today a 73 and 67 for a 279 total.

Jim Ferrier, the home course pro, had rounds today of 74 and 69 for a 284 total and fourth place, a shot ahead of the 285 turned in by Lloyd Mangrum of Monterey Park, Calif. Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C., and Mario Gonzales,

4 D. C. Reservists Study 'Speed War' At Fort Benning

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fort Benning, Ga., July 20.—Four Washington reserve officers learning about lightning war here with the Second Armored (Hell on Wheels) Division.

They are part of a class which is beginning a four-week course in which they will learn to drive the vehicles and fire the weapons of armored warfare. They will complete the course in time to take part in maneuvers which are to begin in mid August in Louisiana.

The four with about 50 others, will get a stiff course that is entirely practical—involving no theory or tactics. They will have some refresher instruction in drill and discipline, but in the main their instruction will be in how to drive tanks, trucks, motorcycles, armored cars and bantam "blitzbuggies" over difficult terrain, and how to strip, assemble and fire four types of machine guns, the pistol, revolver, the new Garand rifle, the 37 mm. antitank gun and two kinds of motars.

Grand Jury May Sift Minneapolis Police Situation

Minneapolis, July 20 (INS).—The Hennepin County grand jury, it was reported tonight, will investigate the mysterious resignation of Minneapolis' Chief of Police Edward B. Hansen.

Mayor Marvin L. Kline, who has indicated Hansen was driven to resign by Minneapolis' powerful underworld after holding office but nine days, said tonight he would welcome a grand jury inquiry and would cooperate with the investigating body.

The mayor announced he planned to go to Duluth, where Hansen was discovered Friday under the care of a physician, to interview his appointee.

Hansen, whose appointment was approved by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and was the first step in the newly-elected mayor's campaign promise to "clean up" the city, handed his badge to a subordinate Wednesday and left a terse note of resignation.

Christian Ideals Will Eventually Win, Pastor Says

"One thing Christians must be sure of is that God does not hurry the progress of the church," the Rev. James P. Rodgers, pastor of the Petworth Baptist Church, stated in his sermon yesterday morning.

Preaching on the text from Matthew 13:33, "The Kingdom of Heaven is Like Unto Leaven," he said that while the victory of Christian ideals was ultimately assured, the progress of thosei ideals must be slow and unhurried.

He interpreted the parable of the woman who took leaven and hid it in the mass of dough as meaning that however slow, the Gospel is "permeating, penetrating and transforming."

"The word cannot lift itself by its own bootstraps," he warned. However long in coming, the remedy must come from without and be applied within."

John Rodgers, nephew of the pastor and boy soprano soloist from Miami, Fla., sang "Come, Ye Blessed" at the service.

Girls' Tiff Starts 20 Men Fighting; Four Stabbed

An argument between two girls late last night resulted in a free-for-all involving 20 men, four of whom were stabbed in the fracas.

According to police, one young woman was jostled by the second so that her purse dropped to the ground at Eleventh and N Streets Northwest. In the ensuing argument, each girl was soon supported by ten men, who turned the oral spat into a knockdown fight.

Most seriously hurt was Robert Simmons, 22, of 1410 Eleventh Street Northwest, stabbed in the side. Less serious wounds were received by William Burton, 24, of 1406 Eleventh Street Northwest. A fourth knife victim was being sought for questioning.

Wife Fires Pistol 'In Play,' Husband Is Seriously Hurt

Edward C. Foster, 40, 6713 Second Street Northwest was in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital with a gunshot wound in his chest, inflicted, police said, by his wife.

Mrs. Ruth Foster, 28, told police that she and her husband were sitting in their home late last night when she picked up a pistol, and pulled the trigger "in play." She insisted the pistol contained blank cartridges and was kept at their home as a precaution against burglars.

Housing conditions—or rather, the lack of housing conditions—were so bad in Radford, Va., when construction was started on a new powder plant there some time ago that workers actually were forced to live in cleaned up chicken coops.

One enterprising businessman leased the basement of an unfinished church, put in double-decker beds and rented them out for three sleeping shifts of 8 hours each. Autos, tents and boxcars were pressed into service as makeshift shelters before adequate housing facilities could be set up for the new residents.

Radford's story, as well as the story of other towns and cities of the country immediately concerned with the national defense effort, is to be dramatized in "Report to the Nation" over WJSV and the Columbia network at 7 tonight.

It's to deal with the progress made in housing America's permanent and emergency workers during the year by the various Federal agencies concerned. It will tell how Coordinator of Defense Housing C. F. Palmer figures out the specific and general housing needs throughout the country and then how they're fulfilled by such agencies as the Farm Security Administration, the Federal Housing Administration, the Defense Housing Corporation, and the U. S. Housing Administration of the Federal Works Agency and the Army and Navy.

Contract Bridge

You are holding the North cards of today's hand at a six no-trump contract, and East opens the jack of spades. How do you play so as to take twelve tricks?

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable.
NORTH DEALER.

NORTH: ♠AQ3 ♡KQ4 ◇AQ1093 ♣Q4
WEST: ♠52 ♡J108 ◇62 ♣A73
EAST: ♠J1098 ♡975 ◇K74 ♣985
SOUTH: ♠K764 ♡A2 ◇J5 ♣KJ1062

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
4 NT	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: J ♠.

The Answer

Declarer wins the spade lead with his ace and plays a club, knocking out West's ace. A diamond is returned, and as it is unlikely that West would underlead his king if he held it, North goes up with the ace, refusing the finesse. He realizes that the spades probably will not break, as East opened the spade jack; and placing the diamond king also in the East hand, North decides to try for a squeeze for the twelfth trick.

He runs four clubs and two hearts, leaving himself with the queen of hearts, the queen of diamonds and the queen, three of spades. East holds the jack, ten, nine of spades and the diamond king; three spades, including the king, and a diamond are in dummy.

Declarer now leads his last heart, and East is squeezed. If he discards his good diamond, North wins his diamond queen and the king, queen of spades. If he throws a spade, North takes his queen of spades and enters dummy for two more spades. Declarer makes his slam in either event, giving up the club ace.

Lord Halifax will attend a luncheon Tuesday arranged by Mayor Fletcher Bowron and a reception that night arranged by the British consul for representatives of war relief groups.

British Lifeboats To Be Outfitted With Wireless

London, July 20 (AP).—The government soon will require all lifeboats to carry wireless sets which automatically send distress signals as part of their equipment, a B. B. C. announcer said today.

Lifeboats also will have to be equipped with larger water tanks, more varied and nutritious foods and oils for massaging sun blisters and sores, the announcer said.

He made the announcement after an unnamed naval officer had broadcast his account of near starvation and death from thirst during 23 days in an open lifeboat in the south Atlantic.

The officer said he climbed into the boat with 17 other Europeans and 64 East Indians after his liner had been sunk by a German raider. When the boat finally reached the Brazilian coast five Europeans and 25 Indians had died.

The boat carried about a tablespoonful of water for each person each day, he said, and each was allowed one biscuit per day.

U.S. Eyes Spain As War Base, Paper Charges

By Reynolds Packard
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Rome, July 20.—Italian Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano's newspaper, Il Telegrafo, of Leghorn, asserted today that President Roosevelt is plotting to create a Western Front against the Axis in Spain and Portugal while Germany is involved against Russia.

The accusation, contained in an editorial written by Giovanni Ansaldo, followed the Rome radio's assertion in a Sunday morning English broadcast that Mr. Roosevelt's blacklisting of 1,800 South American concerns doing business with the Axis is "an act of belligerency."

The Telegrafo, accusing the United States of trying to spread the war to Spain and Portugal and open up a new front, asserted that Generalissimo Francisco Franco's Madrid speech Thursday constituted a warning to Mr. Roosevelt to drop such plans because Spain is ready to resist.

"Mr. Roosevelt and the group running the White House, as result of the Axis-Russian War, want to aid the Soviets before Russia is smashed by Germany," the editorial asserted.

Regarding the President's blacklisting of the 1,800 Latin American firms, Virginio Gayda, writing in the Sunday Voce d'Italia, said the President was trying to acquire economic domination in South America to bolster the United States war moves.

Taking another anti-American tack, newspapers expressed cautious approval of the new Japanese cabinet lineup. The Popolo Di Roma suggested that the inclusion of naval and military leaders in the cabinet was a reaction to what it called an American threat to Japan arising from the fortification of small United States islands in the Pacific.

French Algerian Paper Warns U. S.

Algiers, July 20 (U.P.).—The United States was warned bluntly today by the newspaper La Depeche Algerienne that France, with her empire defenses newly strengthened, is prepared to put up a "hot fight" against any American encroachment involving Dakar, Senegal or Morocco.

The editorial of the Algiers newspaper indicated that Gen. Maxime Weygand and Governor General Pierre Boisson of Dakar had prepared new defenses since the British attacks at Oran and Dakar and said that the landing of any foreign military forces "would not be an easy job."

(Boisson, in a radio address to the French people from Dakar Sunday, said that French West Africa is ready to fight again if necessary "to prove its fidelity to France.")

The editorial reviewed the United States military occupation of Iceland, the question of Irish bases and defense measures which Portugal was said to be taking.

"Portgual is seriously concerned and is taking daily measures to reinforce its garrison in the Azores, toward which American ambitions are revealed from day to day," it was stated.

The paper said "It is recalled, moreover, that the numerous visits of Weyand prove that France will not let the least bit of her colonial empire be taken away without a hot fight."

Yoo-Hoo Antics Top Nation's Dizzy Doings of the Week

By the Associated Press

New York, July 20 (AP).—The yoo-hoo epidemic may not have exactly swept the Nation this week, but it certainly took a lively hop-skip-and-jump.

A cosmetics firm brought out lipstick in "Yoo-hoo Red" . . . posters of an Atlantic City beauty contest proclaimed, "Yoo-hoo—you're invited" . . . In Springfield, Ill., an enraged bull chased a man who yelled at him: "Yoo-hoo!"

And in Portland, Oreg., the tables were turned decisively in the "yoo-hoo" situation when some girls yoo-hooed a lieutenant-colonel who was playing golf—in shorts!

An undecided plant on a farm in Belgrade, Nebr., produced five potatoes underground and four tomatoes up above . . . And a pond in Elmira, N. Y., yielded a fish with two humps like a camel, a fish with three eyes, and, finally, a fish with two heads . . .

Assailed by a dream that he was having a tooth pulled, a 10-year-old Los Angeles boy jumped out of bed, threw his clothes into a suitcase, threw the suitcase out of the window, jumped out after it, and ran 21 blocks . . . and in St. Louis, a woman fainted, her husband kissed her to revive her, she revived—and slapped him.

A half-year Spanish student at the University of Texas accidentally took a two-year exam, then a one-year exam, flunked the one-year one, and passed the two-year one . . . A Buffalo man made the Navy weight requirement by eating 23 bananas and drinking 4 quarts of milk at one whack . . . and a Rochester, N. Y., fireman drove blithely to work with his car on fire . . .

A woman candidate in Hopewell, Va., passed out campaign cigars . . . A cocktail party was held for a cow in a second floor hotel room at Atlantic City . . . and a Charleston, S. C., man listed as his qualifications for the job of dog-catcher: "It dislike all dogs—little dogs, big dogs, cute dogs, shaggy dogs, ugly dogs and even hot dogs". . . .

Canada's Curb On Inflation Studied Here

By John H. Crinder
Copyright by New York Times

Canada's method for stabilizing wages and outlawing "illegal" strikes, consisting of a combination of compulsory mediation with provision for periodic increases in wages, which were "frozen" as a counter-inflationary measure, has aroused considerable interest among some defense planners here, it became known yesterday.

Faced with the threat of inflation, President Roosevelt has his economic advisors engaged in finding the most effective means for preventing the "vicious spiral" of inflation from stealing the fruits of general economic gains now being enjoyed by a great part of the population.

Since a primary counter-inflation task of the government in a war economy is to curb the spendable income of individuals as the demands of the armament effort diminish the supply of goods available to consumers, measures within this category must be directed towards diverting the purchasing power of consumers.

The Administration will use the new tax bill to reduce the spendable income of persons dependent upon investments for such income, by taxing the profits of the corporations in the first instance, and secondly by taxing the income of individuals who benefit from the distribution of the corporate profits.

A second Administration move against inflation takes the form of high-pressure selling of defense bonds and stamps, the idea being to divert consumer purchasing power while at the same time helping to finance the armament effort through methods other than the inflationary sale of securities to the banking system.

Third, the Administration is attacking the problem of speculative price rises, and will shortly take more effective action both as regards prices generally and rents.

There remains the problem of wages, regarding which nothing has been done thus far save to provide for mediation of strikes in defense industries.

Canada, on the other hand, has combined a means for minimizing the possibility of strikes with stabilization of wages for the "duration." It has the effect of causing labor to exchange its right to strike without first following mediation procedure, for a guarantee of wages related to the cost of living.

Supplementing the mediation procedure, thee Canadian government, by an order-in-council dated December 16, 1940, provided for the stabilization of wages by providing that there should be no basic wage increase over the maximum wage paid in a base period, from 1926 through December 18, 1940. It also provided for "cost of living bonuses," which were clarified by an amendment on June 27.

The order-in-council says that the wage rates "may be supplemented by a separate cost of living bonus usually of $1.25 per week for each rise of 5 per cent in the cost of living in order to safeguard the workers against increases in the cost of basic necessities of life."

Canal Is Vital To Colombia, Her Chief Says

By the Associated Press

Bogota, Colombia, July 20.—President Eduardo Santos declared today Colombia's position as a neighbor of the Panama Canal imposed upon his nation the "obligation" of assuring that the vital waterway "may never be attacked or damaged from our territory."

Addressing a joint session of Congress shortly after the Senate and the chamber of deputies began their 1941 sessions, the President reaffirmed Colombia's friendship for the United States and delivered an attack upon the "philosophy of naziism."

An Essential Route

President Santos told Colombians the canal "constitutes for Colombia an essential communications route, the interruption of which would cost us enomous damage."

He termed it also "vital to the life of America and vital for the defense of the United States."

The Chief Executive declared Colombia could not reduce her actions and spirit to "formulas of cold neutrality" in the face of the international situation and recommended that the Congress approve at this session the Havana accord of last year.

In his condemnation of naziism, the President said its philosophy "is simply equivalent to the destruction of our nationality."

"If its doctrines," he declared, "impose themselves—and they are doctrines backed by immense force, not by scientific motives nor human feelings—countries like Colombia would pass automatically into a state of slavery. We might even become important wheels of a monstrous machine, but would no longer be free men nor a free nation."

"It is stupid," he said, for little nations to hope to avoid any connection with the European conflagration and its effects by "just turning out backs. Instead, we have the obligation of looking it face to face and contributing each one with its own strength to find the best solution to the world problem."

Army Chaplain Is Guest Preacher

"Four Christian Wishes for Today" was the subject of the sermon at the Columbia Heights Christian Church yesterday morning by Chaplain Walter Zimmerman of the United States Army.

Conducting the service in place of Arthur P. Wilson, pastor of the church, who was out of town for the day, Chaplain Zimmerman made religious application of the theory of social wishes, set forth by Prof. Thomas of the University of Chicago. Using passages from the Gospel as illustration, he said that fulfillment of the four wishes—for security, response, recognition and new experience—were the key to religious as well as social adjustment.
